

A salute and a prayer for the fallen

PAGES 6-9

Honouring their comrades: Bernard
Morgan, left, and Henry Rice in Normandy yesterday

MAIL HEALTH GURU MICHAEL MOSLEY MISSING IN GREECE

Huge search for columnist who vanished on holiday island walk

A MAJOR search operation is under way for Mail columnist Dr Michael Mosley, who has vanished during a walk on a Greek island.

Police fear Dr Mosley, 67, may have 'slipped, tripped or fallen' while hiking alone in blistering 36C (97F) heat on Wednesday.

His wife, Dr Clare Bailey, 62, raised

By Andy Jehring, Anthee Carassava and Nick Pisa in Symi

the alarm when he failed to return home by 7.30pm and local authorities began tracing his route overnight. Police filed a missing person report at 10.30am yesterday and Athens sprang into gear to support the tiny holiday island of Symi.

By midday, each of the emergency services in Greece had been seconded by local authorities to find the world-renowned exponent of the 5:2 diet, who was last seen leaving Saint Nicholas beach towards the town of Pedi, via a rocky path with steep sections.

The coastguard scoured the sea, the fire brigade searched the remote island's forests and hills, with a drone flying overhead and volunteers also helping with the search.

'Any and every attempt to track him down has not produced any result,' Greek police spokesman Constantina Dimoglidou told the

Turn to Page 4

Concern: Dr Mosley with his wife Clare