

Two royal health bombshells

LET'S PRAY THAT THEY'RE BOTH OK

Kate to spend up to two weeks in hospital – and won't return to public life until Easter – after abdominal surgery

King will undergo 'corrective procedure' on enlarged prostate next week as monarch cancels engagements

THE King and the Princess of Wales are both having serious medical treatment, it emerged yesterday.

Kate, 42, is recovering in hospital

By Rebecca English Royal Editor

after abdominal surgery and Charles, 75, was diagnosed yesterday with an enlarged prostate and is set for an operation next week.

The princess underwent her planned procedure on Tuesday at the London Clinic in Marylebone.

Details of her condition have not been released but she will remain in the private hospital for about two weeks before a lengthy period of recovery at home. Kate has cancelled her planned engagements and foreign travel and is unlikely to resume public duties until after Easter. Little over an

Turn to Page 4