THREE former British servicemen were among the victims of an 'outrageous' Israeli air strike which killed seven aid workers in Gaza.

Former Royal Marines James Henderson and John Chapman and an ex-soldier named last night as James Kirby died in a drone strike on an aid convoy that triggered worldwide condemnation.

The team, which was providing security for the World Central Kitchen charity, were hit on Monday as they moved food from a warehouse to distribute to Gaza's starving population.

Israel's prime minister Benjamin Netanyahu acknowledged that Israeli forces were to blame, saying the aid workers had been killed by an 'unintended strike'. He said officials were 'checking thoroughly' what had happened.

But aid agencies accused Israel of deliberately targeting their staff. And Mr Netanyahu was last night under intense pressure to explain why the attack happened – and to guarantee that there will be no further strikes against aid workers.

Ships carrying 240 tonnes of food aid were yesterday reported to have turned back from
