RISHI Sunak last night warned Labour was a 'soft touch' on migrants.

He hit out at opposition politicians for supporting two protests that stopped the Home Office moving migrants from costly hotels to the Bibby Stockholm barge.

A Labour mayor led a blockade that forced one operation to be abandoned. And one of the party's MPs shared a call for 'comrades' to join another roadblock that ended in clashes with police and dozens of arrests. Protesters had swarmed a coach, slashing its tyres to stop it from leaving.

The dramatic scenes came yesterday after official figures showed 711 people crossed the Channel in dinghies on Wednesday, the most on one day this year.

The influx came as immigration enforcement officers continued detaining the first migrants due to be sent to Rwanda. The
