As net migration over two years hits record 1.3million, former Home Secretary describes figures as 'slap in the face' for voters

SUELLA LEADS TORY REVOLT ON MIGRATION

By David Barrett and Jason Groves

SUELLA Braverman led a growing Tory revolt over rocketing migration figures last night, describing them as a 'slap in the face' to voters.

The former home secretary insisted 'enough is enough' after bombshell data showed net migration hit a record 1.3million over the past two years.

The row intensified after the Office for National Statistics released data which it said showed a 'marked change' in post-Brexit immigration since 2021.

A steep rise in net migration, driven by arrivals from outside the EU, triggered the sharpest rise in the population of England and Wales since the 1960s baby boom.

Revised ONS figures released yesterday showed that net migration was 745,000 last year – roughly the population of Leeds.

The population of England and Wales has now passed 60million for the first time after growing at the fastest rate since 1962.

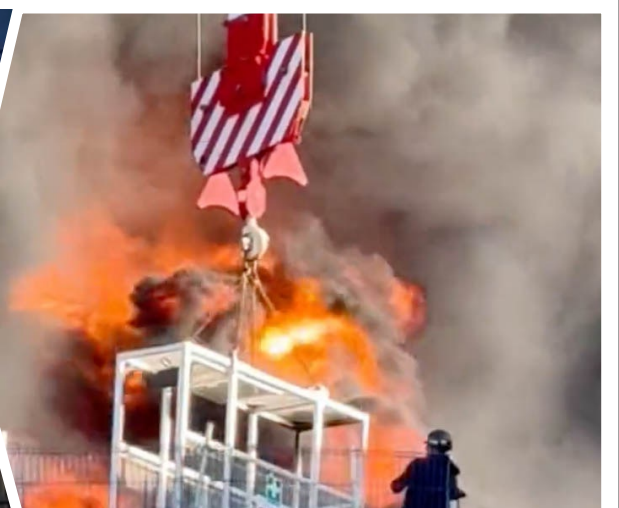

Mrs Braverman, who made a blistering attack on Rishi Sunak when he sacked her last week, yesterday detailed how she would have shaken up the border system had he given her his backing.

'The pressure on housing, the NHS, schools, wages and community cohesion is unsustainable,' she said. 'When do we say:
