ANGELA Rayner is billing the taxpayer thousands of pounds for a 'vanity photographer' to boost her image.

The Mail can reveal the Deputy Prime Minister, who has been mired in controversy over freebies from Labour donors and could face a sleaze inquiry, has risked a fresh storm by appointing the personal photographer on a salary of £68,000.

Although Downing Street has employed photographers to record the Prime Minister for some years, Ms Rayner is the first deputy to be awarded her own. Simon Walker has been given the title of Chief Photographer to the Deputy PM and Ministry of Housing, Communities and Local Government.

Ms Rayner yesterday acknowledged that voters were 'angry' about revelations that she
