DISGRACED, REVILED... BUT NOT A DAY IN JAIL

Mugshot: Huw Edwards

HUW Edwards told a paedophile that a folder of sick child abuse images was 'amazing'.

The disgusting comment emerged at the former BBC star's sentencing yesterday as his extraordinary downfall was completed.

Edwards also asked for 'more' after receiving a video of a child aged between seven and nine engaged in a sex act, the court was told.

But the former face of the BBC – who in September 2022 announced Queen

Elizabeth's death to the nation – avoided jail, despite admitting three counts of making indecent images of children. He was instead given a six-month suspended jail sentence.

It means Edwards has not spent any time in a prison cell, given that he was bailed after his guilty pleas in July.

As the hearing laid bare the full extent of his offending, it also emerged Edwards, 63, gave up to £1,500 to the paedophile who sent him dozens of
