SIR KEIR Starmer today pledges to crack down hard on the 'bulging benefits bill blighting our society' as he tries to steal the Tories' political clothes over abuses of the welfare system.

The Prime Minister uses an article in today's Mail on Sunday to promise 'sweeping changes' to try to tame the £137 billion bill for welfare benefits – including a blitz on cheats and those who 'game the system' – vowing: 'No more business as usual.'
