BILLIONS IN BUDGET STILL WON'T CURE NHS, ADMITS STREETING

Health Secretary says service will face 'real problems' despite huge handout tomorrow

PLOUGHING billions into the NHS will only 'arrest the decline', Wes Streeting has admitted. The Health Secretary warned the additional funding set to be unveiled in Labour's first Budget tomorrow is unlikely to deliver major improvements and will not prevent patients dying while waiting for care this winter.

Speaking at St George's Hospital in Tooting, south London, yesterday he said there is 'no magic wand' and the
