

Stripping Harry & Meghan of their titles is the only way to stop their nonsense

ROW OVER HARRY'S 'ROYAL' WEBSITE REBRAND

Couple accused of breaching deal with late Queen by switching to 'Sussex.com'

PRINCE Harry and Meghan's new website using their Sussex titles is a breach of their agreement with the late Queen, it was claimed last night.

The couple's 'provocative' decision to relaunch their

By Rebecca English and Claire Duffin

homepage as 'Sussex.com' sparked accusations they are trying to be 'more royal'.

Well-placed sources said the new online venture would provide a 'big challenge' for Buckingham Palace's Lord Chamberlain. The top royal official must decide whether to take the Sussexes to task or 'let it slide' in order to keep the already fragile family peace.

The growing row centres around the Duke and Duchess's decision to replace their Archewell website – the umbrella name for all their philanthropic and business endeavours – with

Turn to Page 6

'Truly wonderful' radio legend Steve Wright dies aged 69

SEE PAGE EIGHT