

The millennials who cut off their parents because they're bad for their mental health

SEE PAGES 18-19

King's Speech today will curb the power of residents to block controversial developments – even in some Green Belt areas

PM: ONLY DEBATE WILL BE 'HOW NOT IF' WE BUILD

By Jason Groves
Political Editor

SIR Keir Starmer will launch a fresh assault on the planning system today – meaning communities can debate only 'how, not if' homes are built.

Sources said today's King's Speech will include a new Planning Bill which will curb residents' ability to block controversial developments.

Areas of the Green Belt deemed 'low quality' will be re-designated as 'Grey Belt' and released for development. Local authorities will also be required to identify land for building.

The Prime Minister has pledged to 'take the brakes off Britain' with a string of growth-boosting measures to be unveiled in today's speech.

Decisions on key infrastructure projects, such as the miles of pylons to link new windfarms to the grid, will increasingly be handed to ministers.

Other measures will include legislation to begin the re-nationalisation of the railways and controversial class-war plans to impose VAT on private schools.

It is expected to be one of the biggest
Turn to Page 4

Wounded: Donald Trump addresses Republican supporters

Puzzling questions on Trump shooting fuelling an avalanche of conspiracy theories

SEE PAGES 10-11