

Night I was thrown in a police cell after my cheating husband accused me of assault

By the former editor of Good Housekeeping magazine

With millions – including many Mail readers – STILL to decide

POLL THAT SHOWS IT'S NOT TOO LATE TO STOP STARMER SUPERMAJORITY

By David Churchill
Chief Political Correspondent

A 'TERRIFYING' Labour supermajority could be averted, a major poll of undecided voters reveals.

One in ten, amounting to more than four million ballots, are unsure about who to back, giving the Tories hope of avoiding a wipeout.

In the first study of its kind, nearly six in ten of the undecided say they are still weighing up whether they prefer Rishi Sunak or Sir Keir Starmer with less than a week to go.

Senior Tories last night jumped on the findings as proof there was a 'huge amount to play for' and that voters can still 'place a boulder in Labour's path' to obtaining a 'blank cheque' to increase taxes.

Previous analysis has suggested that it would require only a small number of former Conservative voters to return to the Tory fold to see off the threat of an unprecedented

Turn to Page 6

Undercover US cop tells court of 'imminent'
kidnap threat
to Holly

SEE
PAGES
12-13