FAYED FAKED DEMENTIA TO DODGE SEX ABUSE PROBE, SAYS HIS SON

MOHAMED Al Fayed evaded prosecution by tricking police into believing he had dementia, one of his sons reveals today.

Omar Fayed, 37, said the deception allowed his billionaire father to escape justice over his alleged sexual crimes, now thought to involve dozens of women. 'He got off the hook on the grounds he was mentally incapacitated,' Omar tells The Mail on Sunday today. But the tycoon didn't have dementia and was really 'as sharp as a tack'.

Sources have told this newspaper that Scotland Yard, which has faced criticism for failing to bring the Harrods owner to justice, is examining the astonishing claim as part of its investigation into those
