RAYNER'S MAKING A FOOL OF YOU, KEIR

Scandal over deputy's home is 'corrosive to your reputation', Tory chairman tells Starmer

KEIR Starmer and Angela Rayner were last night accused of breaking their pledge to uphold standards in public life.

Tory party chairman Richard Holden said the Labour leader's 'unwillingness' to probe claims against his deputy over her property dealings was damning.

Ms Rayner is facing fresh accusations of rule-breaking after The Mail on Sunday exposed social media posts that cast more doubt on her insistence she lived apart from her husband and children for their first five years of marriage. In one post, she said she had 'just got home' – but the backdrop is her then-husband's Stockport house, where she claims she did not live.

Mr Holden led a clamour of calls from Tory MPs for Ms Rayner to answer 'simple' questions about her property affairs. She is under
