

“All the News
That’s Fit to Print”

The New York Times

THE WEATHER
Today, cloudy, dry, high 48. Tonight, cloudy, rain arrives late, low 39. Tomorrow, cloudy, periodic rain, may change to snow in the evening, high 41. Weather map is on Page B12.

VOL. CLXXIII . . . No. 60,046 © 2024 The New York Times Company SATURDAY, JANUARY 27, 2024 Prices in Canada may be higher $4.00

Mexico’s Haunting Crisis of the Missing
Families looking for loved ones add to the Tree of Hope in Salamanca, Mexico. More than 94,000 people have vanished. Page A5.

JURY SAYS TRUMP OWES $83 MILLION

Compensating Carroll for Years of Defamation

This article is by Benjamin Weiser, Jonah E. Bromwich, Maria Cramer and Kate Christobek.

Former President Donald J. Trump was ordered by a Manhattan jury on Friday to pay $83.3 million to the writer E. Jean Carroll for defaming her in 2019 after she accused him of a decades-old rape, attacks he continued in social media posts, at news conferences and even in the midst of the trial itself.

Ms. Carroll’s lawyers had argued that a large award was necessary to stop Mr. Trump from continuing to attack her. The nine-member jury responded by awarding Ms. Carroll $65 million in punitive damages, finding that Mr. Trump had acted with malice. On one recent day, he made more than 40 derisive posts about Ms. Carroll on his Truth Social website.

On Friday, the judge, Lewis A. Kaplan, called in the jury shortly after 4:30 p.m., cautioning, “We will have no outbursts.” The verdict was delivered nine minutes later to utter silence in the courtroom.

Mr. Trump had already left for the day when the dollar figures were read aloud. Hearing the numbers, his lawyers slumped in their seats. The jury was dismissed, and Ms. Carroll, 80, embraced her lawyers. Minutes later, she walked out of the courthouse arm in arm with her legal team, beaming for the cameras.

“This is a great victory for every woman who stands up when she’s been knocked down and a huge defeat for every bully who has tried to keep a woman down,” Ms. Carroll said in a statement, thanking her lawyers effusively.

Mr. Trump, who had walked out of the courtroom earlier during the closing argument by Ms. Carroll’s lawyer, said in a Truth Social post that the verdict was “absolutely ridiculous.”

“Our legal system is out of control, and being used as a political weapon,” he said, pledging to appeal. “They have taken away all First Amendment rights.”

Notably, he did not attack Ms. Carroll.

Outside the courthouse, Mr. Carroll said she was “overjoyed.”

Continued on Page A13

Top Museums Shutter Native American Exhibits

By JULIA JACOBS and ZACHARY SMALL

The American Museum of Natural History will close two major halls exhibiting Native American objects, its leaders said on Friday, in a dramatic response to new federal regulations that require museums to obtain consent from tribes before displaying or performing research on cultural items.

“The halls we are closing are ar-

Tribes Get More Input as Law Takes Effect

tifacts of an era when museums such as ours did not respect the values, perspectives and indeed shared humanity of Indigenous peoples,” Sean Decatur, the museum’s president, wrote in a letter to the museum’s staff on Friday morning. “Actions that may feel

The American Museum of Natural History is closing galleries.

His Fact Checkers Long Gone, Musk Echoes Voting Lies on X

By JIM RUTENBERG and KATE CONGER

In the spring of 2020, when President Donald J. Trump wrote messages on Twitter warning that increased reliance on mail-in ballots would lead to a “rigged election,” the platform ran a corrective, debunking his claims.

“Get the facts about mail-in voting,” a content label read. “Experts say mail-in ballots are very rarely linked to voter fraud,” the hyperlinked article declared.

This month, Elon Musk, who has since bought Twitter and rebranded it X, echoed several of Mr. Trump’s claims about the American voting system, putting forth distorted and false notions that American elections were wide open for fraud and illegal voting by noncitizens.

This time, there were no fact checks. And the X algorithm — under Mr. Musk’s direct control — helped the posts reach large audiences, in some cases drawing many millions of views.

Biden’s Campaign Calls Posts ‘Irresponsible’

Since taking control of the site, Mr. Musk has dismantled the platform’s system for flagging false election content, arguing it amounted to election interference.

Now, his early election-year attacks on a tried-and-true voting method are raising alarms among civil rights lawyers, election administrators and Democrats. They worry that his control over the large social media platform gives him an outside ability to reignite the doubts about the American election system that were so prevalent in the lead-up to the riot at the Capitol on Jan. 6, 2021.

As Mr. Trump’s victory in New Hampshire moved the race closer sudden to some may seem long overdue to others.”

Continued on Page A15

The museum is closing galleries dedicated to the Eastern Woodlands and the Great Plains this weekend, and covering a number of other display cases featuring Native American cultural items as it goes through its enormous collection to make sure it is in compliance with the new federal rules, which took effect this month.

Museums around the country have been covering up displays as curators scramble to determine whether they can be shown under the new regulations. The Field Museum in Chicago covered some display cases, the Peabody Museum of Archaeology and Ethnology at Harvard University said it would remove all funerary belongings from exhibition and the Cleveland Museum of Art has covered up some cases.

But the action by the American Museum of Natural History in New York, which draws 4.5 million visitors a year, making it one of the most visited museums in the world, sends a powerful message to the field. The museum’s anthropology department is one of the oldest and most prestigious in the United States, known for doing pioneering work under a long

Continued on Page A17

Child of War Brings Solace of Music to Ukraine

By CARLOTTA GALL

KYIV, Ukraine — When the owner of an underground club in Kyiv reached out to Western musicians to play in Ukraine, long before the war, there were not so many takers.

But an American from Boston, Mirza Ramic, accepted the invitation, spawning a lasting friendship with the club’s owner, Taras Khimchak.

“I kept coming back,” Mr. Ramic, 40, said in an interview at the club, Mezzanine, where he was preparing for a performance during a recent tour of Ukraine.

The country, he said “is one of the places that has welcomed me most and been the most supportive of my music.” And so especially after the Russian invasion two years ago, he added, “I wanted to come now, to show my support in these hard times.”

Mr. Ramic, born in Bosnia, is a child of war himself. At 11, he lost his father in the shelling of his hometown, Mostar, and spent years as a refugee, moving from

U.N. to Explore Workers’ Link To Oct. 7 Raid

Fires 12 Aid Employees After Israel’s Claims

This article is by Farnaz Fassihi, Edward Wong, Russell Goldman and Ronen Bergman.

The United Nations on Friday fired 12 of its employees in Gaza and began an investigation into them after accusations by Israel that they had helped plan and had participated in the Oct. 7 terrorist assault that left about 1,200 Israelis dead and over 240 captured.

The workers, all men employed by the U.N. agency that aids Palestinians, known by the acronym UNRWA, are subject to a criminal inquiry, two U.N. officials said.

“UNRWA reiterates its condemnation in the strongest possible terms of the abhorrent attacks,” said Philippe Lazzarini, the head of the agency. “Any UNRWA employee who was involved in acts of terror will be held accountable, including through criminal prosecution.”

In addition, a senior U.N. official, briefed on the accusations, called them “extremely serious and horrific.”

UNRWA has long denied Israel’s claims that it fuels anti-Israeli incitement in Gaza. But it took a sharply different approach to the more serious accusations on Friday, just days after Israel presented them to the agency.

The accusations quickly led the United States to temporarily halt funding to the organization. UNRWA, which provides social services in the Gaza Strip, has been the principal agency overseeing the distribution of aid to Gazans amid a humanitarian crisis that has worsened through months of war since the Oct. 7 attack.

“The United States is extremely troubled by the allegations that 12 UNRWA employees may have been involved in the Oct. 7 Hamas terrorist attack on Israel,” the State Department said in a statement.

The United States, the agency’s biggest donor, provided it with $340 million in 2022 and several hundred million dollars in 2023.

Three Israeli defense officials said military intelligence officers have collected an enormous trove of information after Oct. 7, and in the past two weeks they matched it with a second cache of intelligence that solidified an assessment that the UNRWA employees had been involved in the attack.

UNRWA was created to provide aid to millions of Palestinians across the Middle East whose families fled or were forced from

Continued on Page A8

ISRAEL MUST SHUN ACTS OF GENOCIDE, U.N. COURT RULES

NO DECREE TO END WAR

Panel Calls for More Aid for Palestinians and Hostage Releases

This article is by Patrick Kingsley, Raja Abdulrahim, Aaron Boxerman and Michael Levenson.

JERUSALEM — The United Nations’ highest court said on Friday that Israel must take action to prevent acts of genocide by its forces in the Gaza Strip, adding to the international pressure on Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu to reduce death and destruction in the battered Palestinian enclave.

But the court did not rule on whether Israel was committing genocide, and it did not call on Israel to stop its military campaign to crush Hamas, as South Africa, which brought the case, had requested.

While the ruling had elements that each side could embrace, the court allowed the case charging Israel with genocide to proceed, which will likely keep the country under international scrutiny for years to come.

Judges arriving at the U.N.’s top court in The Hague on Friday.

“The court is acutely aware of the extent of the human tragedy that is unfolding in the region, and is deeply concerned about the continuing loss of life and human suffering,” Joan E. Donoghue, the president of the International Court of Justice in The Hague, said as she announced the interim ruling. The decision also ordered the delivery of more humanitarian aid to Palestinians, and called for the release of hostages held by armed groups in Gaza.

The South Africans who argued the case this month have equated the oppression they faced under country to country with his mother as she struggled to find a way to survive.

Continued on Page A7

Mirza Ramic performing at the club Mezzanine in Kyiv, Ukraine.

THE SATURDAY PROFILE

They lived in Zagreb, Croatia; Tunis; and Prague, before moving to the United States, first to Arizona, and eventually Boston.

There, he finished his education and began a career as a musician, forming an electronic band, Arms and Sleepers, with a college friend, Max Lewis.

Now a solo musician, he was back playing in Kyiv and two other cities in the fall, undeterred

Continued on Page A9

BUSINESS B1-7 Diverging Financial Paths A change in perception among investors about China and Japan is one of the biggest themes in the markets. PAGE B1	INTERNATIONAL A4-10 U.K. Pushes U.S. on Ukraine Britain, often a wingman to the United States in defense, is urging its ally to stand firm against President Vladimir V. Putin of Russia. PAGE A8	NATIONAL A11-17 Lahaina’s Toxic Waste Crews are sending truckloads of wildfire debris to a temporary disposal site, alarming Native Hawaiian residents and putting a coral reef at risk. PAGE A11	ARTS C1-6 New Discoveries at Sundance At this year’s festival, a documentary about Will Ferrell and his friend Harper Steele brought the house down. PAGE C1	SPORTS B8-11 Transforming Liverpool Jürgen Klopp, who is stepping down as manager at season’s end, changed a culture and spawned success. PAGE B10
Trouble for Textile Mills Apparel makers in the Carolinas say trade policy must change because of a boom in tariff-free shipments. PAGE B1	U.S. Journalist Remains in Jail A Russian court extended the detention of Evan Gershkovich, who is awaiting trial on a spying charge Washington says is politically motivated. PAGE A9	Gas Export Terminals Paused President Biden said the government would analyze impacts on climate, the economy and national security before approving new projects. PAGE A12	A Treasure Trove of Lincoln The New York Public Library is acquiring the collection of Jonathan Mann, an expert on the former president. PAGE C2	An Intergenerational Battle Jannik Sinner, 22, part of a new wave in tennis, defeated Novak Djokovic, 36, at the Australian Open. PAGE B11
	Haiti Mission Is in Jeopardy A contingent of 1,000 Kenyan officers was intended to lead a U.N.-backed policing effort, but a Kenyan court has prohibited the deployment. PAGE A4	N.R.A. Chief Takes the Stand Wayne LaPierre, testifying in a civil corruption case, said that he had no knowledge of prodigious spending on private jets. PAGE A13		OPINION A20-21 Ezra Klein PAGE A20

