As we reveal Starmer plans talks with EU leaders over new relationship, Boris warns UK is 'on the road to serfdom'

BREXIT: NOW THE RETREAT BEGINS

SIR Keir Starmer will start the process to renegotiate Britain's post-Brexit deal within weeks, The Mail on Sunday has been told.

The new Prime Minister wants more relaxed freedom of movement rules and lower trade barriers, EU sources believe, and is willing to sign the UK back up to some Brussels rules in exchange. They are expecting him to use a summit at Winston Churchill's birthplace, Blenheim Palace, later this month to unofficially set the wheels in motion. But Boris Johnson last night sounded the alarm about any renegotiation, warning: 'We are on the road to serfdom under Starmer.'

And his Brexit negotiator Lord Frost said Labour would take every chance to 'chip away at our national independence'.

Sir Keir will host nearly 50 leaders from
