BRITISH Jews suffered an 'explosion in hatred' in the wake of the Hamas terror attack, shocking figures reveal today.

The number of anti-Semitic incidents jumped 147 per cent last year to record levels, with a massive surge in the wake of the Hamas atrocities on October 7, a report said.

The Community Security Trust, a charity, recorded 4,103 instances of anti-Semitism, up from 1,662 in 2022. It included 266 violent assaults on Jews, up 96 per cent year-on-year and the highest figure since the CST started gathering data 40 years ago.

For the first time, it recorded at least one anti-Semitic incident for every police force in the UK, with the majority – more than 2,400 – in London, including some at vigils for Hamas's Israeli hostages.

Home Secretary James Cleverly last night condemned the figures as 'utterly deplorable'. Ten of the violent incidents involved fake
