

How to dazzle for the party season

SEE PAGE 37

BY TRINNY WOODALL

As Minister quits over Rwanda Bill just an hour after Rishi tells his MPs: Unite or die...

Will the Tories EVER give up fighting each other and start fighting Labour?

By Harriet Line, Claire Ellicott and David Barrett

ROBERT Jenrick unleashed fresh Tory chaos last night as he resigned as minister for immigration.

It came just an hour after a plea by Rishi Sunak for the party to 'unite or die' over his Rwanda policy.

The Prime Minister had urged factions to pull together to fight Labour instead of themselves after publishing emergency legislation he hopes will finally get the deportation flights off the ground.

Though Mr Sunak said his new Bill would ensure 'our plan cannot be stopped', following defeat in the

Daily Mail COMMENT

DON'T ministers understand how heartily sick the public are of their endless self-indulgent posturing? The only person these histrionics help is Keir Starmer, the ocean-going dud who too many Tory MPs seem hellbent on making look statesman-like and electable

SEE PAGE 16

Supreme Court, he faced immediate criticism from the Right of the party, who felt it did not go far enough.

The PM issued an ultimatum to his party to 'come together as a team' during a tub-thumping appearance before Tory MPs at the 1922 Committee, where he described the legislation as the 'toughest piece of anti-illegal immigration law that we've ever put to the House'.

Mr Sunak said it needed to be passed with a strong majority to 'throw down the gauntlet to the Lords', where it could face tough opposition.

But he faced immediate criticism for shunning the most hardline option and not providing powers to ignore the European Convention on Human Rights.

In a scathing resignation letter, Mr Jenrick described the legislation as 'a triumph of hope over experience'. But a senior Tory source hit back, labelling Mr Jenrick's desertion 'a disgrace'. The source said: 'The PM is trying to solve a

Turn to Page 2

J-Lo wows in crazy look that 'makes her feel bulletproof'

SEE PAGE SEVEN