Charles puts sustainability at heart of his annual address – beside Palace tree adorned with environmentally friendly decorations

ECO-ACTIVIST KING'S GREEN CHRISTMAS DAY MESSAGE

THE King will use his Christmas broadcast tomorrow to deliver a powerful message about the environment.

Charles has long championed green causes and will use his platform to make a timely point about living more sustainably to the millions of viewers tuning in.

While the precise contents of the address are a closely guarded secret, the eco-friendly theme is apparent in the way the message has been filmed.

His Majesty recorded his speech in Buckingham Palace earlier this month in front of a living Christmas tree – potted with its roots intact rather than one which has been cut down. And all its decorations are environmentally friendly, too, crafted from plants or made from recyclable material.

Traditionally, the monarch's Christmas message has been carefully apolitical to avoid dragging the Royal Family into controversy. But King Charles has often spoken out about
