misjudgments' in his treatment before he killed three people in Nottingham last year.

It reveals how clinicians 'minimised or omitted' key details that would have exposed the serious risk Calocane, who was diagnosed with paranoid schizophrenia three years earlier, posed to the public.

It means he was left free to stab students Barnaby Webber and Grace O'Malley-Kumar, both 19, as they returned from a night out on June 13 last year before killing caretaker Ian Coates, 65.

The victims' families also blasted
