Dramatic intervention by Labour Deputy's ex-adviser piles even more pressure on her to finally come clean

SHE IS LYING, RAYNER AIDE TELLS POLICE

By Glen Owen

POLITICAL EDITOR

ANGELA RAYNER was last night facing mounting pressure over her 'two homes' row after one of her former aides told police that she had not told the truth about her real 'home'.

Matt Finnegan, Ms Rayner's former chief adviser, has given a statement to Greater Manchester Police in which he states that her actual home was with her then husband – not at the former council house where she was registered on the electoral roll.

The testimony is the latest evidence to shatter the insistence by Labour's deputy leader that she has not broken any rules.

Police announced on Friday that they are investigating claims – first published in The Mail on Sunday – that Ms Rayner breached electoral law by registering a former right-to-buy council
