RISHI Sunak last night told police chiefs to get tough with protesters imposing 'mob rule' in Britain amid a growing row over pro-Palestine marches.

Police leaders were summoned to Downing Street yesterday to discuss concerns about the campaign of intimidation mounted by protesters in the wake of the Hamas terror attacks on Israel on October 7.

The Prime Minister told them: 'There is a growing consensus that mob rule is replacing democratic rule. And we've got to collectively, all of us, change that urgently.'

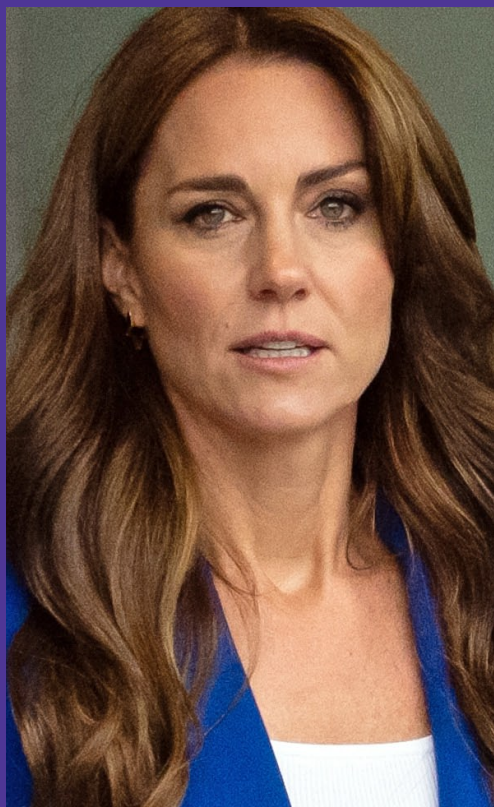

He added: 'We simply cannot allow this pattern of increasingly violent and intimidatory behaviour which is, as far as anyone can see, intended to shout down free debate and stop elected representatives doing their job. That is simply undemocratic.'

In a thinly-veiled criticism of the softly-softly approach taken by police towards some pro-Palestine marches, the PM also warned senior officers that they needed to do much more to reassure the public that they were taking the issue seriously.

'We also need to demonstrate more broadly to the public that you will use the powers you
