FLIGHT CHAOS AS BA IS HIT BY ANOTHER IT MELTDOWN

DOZENS of British Airways flights were disrupted last night after another major IT glitch caused chaos.

Thousands of passengers were left standing in the cold waiting to board flights, while others were stuck on planes waiting for clearance to take off.

The company's website also went down and both the internal and external phone lines were affected.

A BA spokesman said: 'Our flights are currently operating, but are experiencing delays as our teams work to resolve a technical issue.'

It is understood the IT issue meant pilots had problems filing crucial flight plans electronically, and had to manually call operation
