P2JW189000-7-A00100-16DDF61078D

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL.

DOW JONES | News Corp | * * * * * * * | TUESDAY, JULY 8, 2025 ~ VOL. CCLXXXVI NO. 6 | WSJ.com | ★★★★ $5.00

DJIA 44406.36 ▼ 422.17 0.94% | NASDAQ 20412.52 ▼ 0.9% | STOXX 600 543.50 ▲ 0.4% | 10-YR. TREAS. ▼ 14/32, yield 4.394% | OIL $67.93 ▲ $0.93 | GOLD $3,332.20 ▲ $0.60 | EURO $1.1709 | YEN 146.08

What's News

Business & Finance

◆ U.S. stocks slipped after Trump moved trade tensions back to the forefront on Wall Street, with the S&P 500 falling 0.8% and the Dow and Nasdaq both shedding 0.9%. The dollar strengthened. A1

◆ Oil prices rose in U.S. trading, reflecting a broadly muted reaction to OPEC+'s larger-than-expected production increase despite concerns over excess supply. B11

◆ Meta Platforms added another big name to its new "Superintelligence" AI division, hiring a top Apple AI researcher, Ruoming Pang. B1

◆ Saudi Arabia's government fund took a two-thirds stake in a site for a planned Manhattan skyscraper, anticipating returns from New York's recovering real-estate market. B1

◆ Oracle offered U.S. government agencies a 75% discount on its license-based software and a "substantial" discount on cloud service through November. B1

◆ The trial began in a suit brought by former Chicago floor traders against CME, alleging they were harmed by the exchange operator's adoption of electronic markets. B1

◆ Mercedes-Benz car and van sales fell 9% to 547,100 vehicles in the second quarter as the effect of Trump's auto tariffs began to bite. B3

◆ Artificial-intelligence company CoreWeave will acquire Core Scientific in an all-stock transaction valued at approximately $9 billion. B6

◆ Amazon's Prime Day, which this year extends to four days, is expected to bring in a record $12.9 billion in the U.S., up 53% from 2024. B4

World-Wide

◆ Trump reignited his global trade war, renewing his threat to hit partners with punishing tariffs even as he announced a three-week extension to negotiate deals. A1

◆ Trump's threat to put new tariffs on countries embracing the policies of the Brics group added even more uncertainty to global trade. A2

◆ Rescuers searched the Guadalupe River for survivors of the Texas flash floods that killed more than 100 people, with an unknown number of people still missing. A3

◆ Trump said the U.S. would resume providing Ukraine with arms to help it withstand Russian attacks after months of trying without success to draw Moscow into talks to end the war. A6

◆ Trump appointees leading the Justice Department reneged on a promise to open the FBI's files on sex offender Jeffrey Epstein, attempting to quash long-simmering questions and conspiracies that they once promoted. A4

◆ A crew in the Red Sea abandoned ship after their vessel was hit by Yemen's Houthi rebels, the first attack of its kind since Trump announced a truce in May. A6

◆ Russia's former transport minister was found dead in what authorities called a suspected suicide, hours after he was dismissed from his position by President Vladimir Putin. A7

◆ The TSA is rolling out new procedures to allow passengers to keep their shoes on while passing through standard airport screening checkpoints. A3

CONTENTS

Arts in Review...... A11
Business & Finance B2-6
Business News...... B3
Crossword............ A11
Heard on Street.. B12
Markets.............. B11-12
Markets Digest..... B7
Opinion............... A13-15
Personal Journal A9-10
Sports................. A12
Technology.......... B4
U.S. News........... A2-4
World News... A6-7,16

Texas Death Toll Passes 100 as Search Presses On

ELI HARTMAN/ASSOCIATED PRESS

GRIM DISCOVERY: Mexican firefighters, in Texas to help rescue efforts, load a body into a raft on the Guadalupe River in Ingram. The death toll from floods rose to more than 100, as crews kept up the search in hopes of finding some of the missing alive. A3

Wall Street Feels New Tariff Tension

S&P 500 retreats from record level, while dollar, bond yields, oil prices rise

By Matt Wirz
And Angus Berwick

Stocks slipped and the dollar strengthened on Monday after President Trump moved trade tensions back to the forefront on Wall Street.

The S&P 500 fell nearly 1% to 6229.98, still close to the all-time high the index hit last week. The Nasdaq Composite Index and Dow Jones Industrial Average also gave up about 1%.

The WSJ Dollar Index, which tracks the U.S. currency against 16 peers, was up 0.6% and was up three of the past four trading days.

Trump, a Republican, took to his Truth Social platform Monday afternoon to announce 25% tariffs on goods from Japan and South Korea. He later revealed that other nations, including Laos and Malaysia, would face higher levies.

With each post, the major stock indexes fell further. Oil prices and bond yields rose, reflecting concerns that heavier tariffs would lead to higher inflation.

Before extending their deadlines to Aug. 1, the U.S. was set to reimpose reciprocal tariffs on Wednesday for dozens of countries. And even after he singled out Japan and South Korea for higher levies, Trump said their tariff rates could move lower (or higher) depending on how those countries adjusted their trade practices with the U.S.

"The announcements seem to be changing every 30 minutes," said John Belton, portfolio manager for growth equities at Gabelli Funds. "This is more Trump-style negotiations, and the market has grown tired of it the longer it drags on."

The September contract for Brent crude oil rose 1.9%, and the 10-year Treasury yield climbed 0.05 percentage point to 4.394%.

Shares of trade-sensitive companies such as Lululemon, Estée Lauder, First Solar and Deere declined.

Trump also threatened an additional levy on countries aligning themselves with the

Please turn to page A2

Trump Reignites Trade War Threat but Sets Delay

President rolls out new deadline of Aug. 1 for deals, tweaks tariff rises

By Gavin Bade
And Brian Schwartz

WASHINGTON—President Trump reignited his global trade war Monday, renewing his threat to hit partners with punishing tariffs even as he announced a three-week extension to negotiate deals.

Trump signed an executive order extending the date when his so-called reciprocal tariffs would take effect, with a pause previously scheduled to expire at 12:01 a.m. Wednesday. Additionally, Trump sent letters to a handful of nations outlining tariff rates they would pay if they didn't strike trade deals with the U.S. by Aug. 1.

"If you want to play ball, you have to...This is what you have to pay," Trump said during a Monday night meeting with Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu. "As far as I'm concerned, we're done...we're sending out letters to various countries telling them how much tariffs they have to pay."

The administration is close to reaching a deal with India, Trump added. Other officials have said more deals could be announced in the coming days.

"The administration—the president and his trade team—want to cut the best deals for the American people and the American worker," White House press secretary Karoline

Please turn to page A2

◆ Trump steps up fight with Brics nations........................ A2

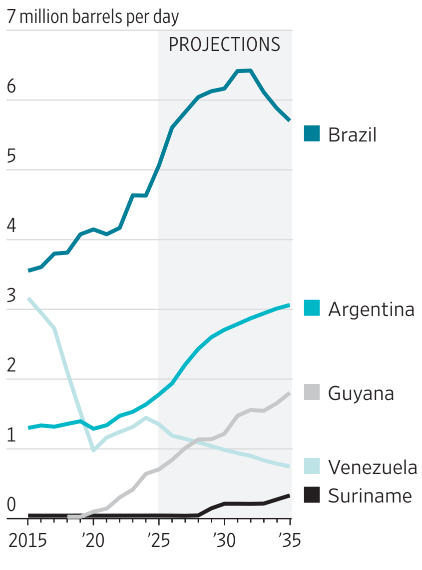
Oil Lures Drillers South

South American oil fields are booming, with Brazil, Guyana and Argentina forecast to drive more than 80% of growth in global oil production outside the OPEC bloc over the next five years. South America's oil bonanza comes as geopolitical tensions drive wild swings in oil markets. B1

Oil and gas production by country



Source: Rystad Energy

Elon Musk Is Running Out Of Road in China

As Tesla falls behind the local competitors it helped create, the billionaire's rupture with Trump is limiting his sway there

As Elon Musk confronts deepening business and political challenges in the U.S., he's also facing trouble in his other most important market: China.

By Raffaele Huang, Lingling Wei and Yoko Kubota

For a while, Tesla was the hottest car on Chinese roads, and Musk was the toast of Beijing. Government officials showered the company with incentives, part of a concerted strategy to turbocharge the Chinese EV industry by injecting Tesla know-how into the country and spurring competition. Tesla's sales took off.

But the risk was always that Tesla would start falling behind the rivals it helped create. Now, that is exactly what's happening.

Tesla's market share has shrunk as other Chinese automakers become more popular. Meanwhile, Musk's reputation as a partner for Beijing in Washington took a

Please turn to page A8

◆ Tim Higgins: Musk can't get over Trump... B4

Think Work-Life Balance Is Overrated? You're Hired!

* * *

Employers get brutally honest, warning applicants of long hours, few boundaries

By Lindsay Ellis

Shopify wants a product manager who can "keep up with an unrelenting pace."

Solace, a healthcare marketplace, tells job seekers: "If you're looking for work-life balance, this isn't it."

A job posting for a senior engineer at software company Rilla urges applicants "please don't join" unless they are eager to work 70 hours a week—in person.

If you think free time is overrated, this is the job market for you. Corporate job listings this summer stress long hours, a competitive business environment and the importance of hustle.

It might seem impractical to recruit applicants with a pitch that loosely translates to "This is going to hurt." But we're a long way from 2022.

Americans are facing monthslong job searches and competition from laid-off workers as companies shrink head count. Though the U.S. is still adding jobs every month, the pace of hiring has slowed and some of the country's largest employers are cutting their white-collar workforces.

In the tougher environment, many applicants find that managers are taking a harder line.

They're not just reining in flexible schedules, remote work and perks that became staples of the previously tight job market. They're warning prospective and new employees to get ready for the grind—and they're not afraid to say it out loud.

Google co-founder Sergey Brin in February told employees that 60 hours a week was the sweet spot of productivity.

The federal government

Please turn to page A10

INSIDE

SPORTS

Just three days into the race, this Tour de France is shaping up to be a classic. A12

DAVID PAUL MORRIS/BLOOMBERG NEWS

BUSINESS & FINANCE

Has there ever been a better time to buy an EV? Car makers rev up incentives. B1

Her Senior Facility Filed for Bankruptcy, Then Wiped Her Out

By Akiko Matsuda

Arlene Kohen was 89 years old and recently widowed when she moved to the Harborside continuing-care retirement community in Port Washington, N.Y., in January 2020. The facility on Long Island offered independent living units, along with skilled nursing, memory care and assisted living.

Getting in wasn't cheap. Harborside required a $945,000 entrance fee, a standard in the industry. On top of that, Kohen was paying $5,700 in monthly fees by the end of her stay. Kohen sold the family house in Great Neck, N.Y., for $838,000 to help cover entry. Harborside told her that 75% of that upfront fee would be refundable to her family upon her death, or returned to her if she chose to leave, also a typical practice in the industry.

Harborside struggled to recruit residents and went bankrupt three times. Finally, the owner sold the business to an investor who is scaling back the level of care offered. Kohen needed more care, so she had to leave.

But because of the way bankruptcy proceedings work, secured creditors get paid before residents.

Kohen's family expects to get back less than one-third of the $710,000 refund the facility promised her.

"That's money that I'll never see," said Beverly Kohen Fried, Kohen's daughter.

Among nearly 2,000 of these types of facilities nationwide, at least 16 have filed for chapter 11 since the outbreak of Covid-19 in March 2020, according to a Wall Street Journal review of court filings and Gibbins Advisors, a healthcare

Please turn to page A4