SECOND UAE RELIEF AIRCRAFT ARRIVES IN NEPAL

■ The second UAE relief aircraft, operated through the UAE Aid Agency, arrived in Nepal carrying 45 tonnes of relief supplies for people affected by floods and landslides. The aid includes essential food supplies, relief materials, power generators, and other vital necessities for those affected. The assistance will help provide urgent support to families affected by the floods and landslides, particularly in the worst-affected areas. The UAE continues its humanitarian efforts to support those affected in Nepal, following the arrival of the first relief aircraft in August to deliver urgent assistance.

Dubai unveils social media rules for medical sector

DHA LISTS BANNED WORDS, CLAIMS AND CERTAIN CLIPS

DUBAI

BY SAJILA SASEENDRAN
Chief Reporter

Dubai's health care regulator has issued a detailed set of social media rules for doctors, clinics and hospitals, banning a long list of exaggerated words and claims that could mislead patients online.

The Dubai Health Authority's (DHA) Standards for Medical Advertisement Content on Social Media apply to every DHA-licensed health facility and health care professional advertising on platforms such as Instagram, Facebook, TikTok, YouTube, Snapchat, WhatsApp and LinkedIn.

Crucially, the rules don't stop at doctors and clinics. Social media influencers who promote a health facility's services, treatments or outcomes are also brought under the standard.

Posts under scanner

Any such post naming or identifying a facility must first be approved by that facility's medical director, and the health facility itself remains liable for content filmed on its premises, even if it's shot on a personal phone by an influencer or posted from a personal account.

Doctors who split their time between Dubai and other countries must keep a separate,

Social media influencers who promote a health facility's services, treatments or outcomes are also brought under the standard.

Dubai-specific social media account that follows these standards in full, including for any content involving patients treated elsewhere.

Ads cannot use words such as "miraculous," "magic," "unique," "the best," "exclusive," "safest," "incomparable," "unprecedented," "100 per cent," "absolutely certain," "assured success," "has no side effects," "get money back," "famous," "pioneer" and "immediate results," among others.

Negative or unfounded statements against other doctors, health care facilities or government entities are barred too.

Facilities and professionals must not use titles that differ from what's on their DHA licence, ruling out terms such as "Cosmetic Specialist," "Aesthetic Consultant," "Cosmetologist," "Anti-Ageing Specialist" or "Beauty Expert."

The prefix "Dr" may only be used by physicians, dentists and professionals holding a recognised PhD, and PhD certificates must be attested by the UAE Ministry of Education.

Every social media post that names or refers to a health facility must be approved by that facility's medical director, who is also responsible for training staff, appointing someone to moderate accounts, and archiving all posts for audits the DHA can carry out at any time.

Written approval

Facilities cannot use the DHA's logo or name, or that of any other government body, without written approval, and cannot feature patients treated in their Dubai facilities on their international social media accounts.

Written consent is mandatory before any patient's picture, video or statement is used in an advert, and separate parental consent is required if the patient is under 18.

According to the DHA, ads must not create unrealistic expectations, use scare tactics to push a treatment, exploit a patient's lack of medical knowledge, or claim a doctor's services are superior to a rival's.

Testimonials comparing different health professions are also disallowed, as is any content that breaches UAE culture, Islamic values or displays intimacy.

More UAE residents turn to monthly car rentals

Rising ownership costs push more motorists towards flexible options

DUBAI

BY DHANUSHA GOKULAN
Chief Reporter

More UAE residents are delaying car purchases and turning to monthly and flexible rentals as ownership costs, vehicle supply constraints and economic uncertainty encourage motorists to keep their options open.

SelfDrive Mobility said demand for monthly and long-term leasing is 30-35 per cent higher than last year, while Udrive reported a 14 per cent year-on-year increase in registrations.

The trend does not suggest residents are abandoning car ownership. Rental operators say some consumers are instead weighing the cost and commitment of buying or financing a vehicle against renting one for only as long as needed.

"Many of these are customers who, under normal circumstances, would have purchased a vehicle," said Soham Shah, CEO and founder of SelfDrive Mobility. Shah said constrained model availability, with shipping and imports limited, is encouraging residents to choose monthly and long-term leasing. SelfDrive's average rental duration is now close to six

Dubai Future Week to be 'defining milestone'

Four-day event to spotlight trends in lifestyle, AI and new markets

DUBAI

Gulf News Report

The Dubai Future Week, a four-day event aimed at bringing together thinkers, innovators, experts and changemakers to exchange ideas and study emerging trends, will take place between November 18 and November 21 this year.

Sheikh Hamdan Bin Mohammed Bin Rashid Al Maktoum, Crown Prince of Dubai, Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Defence of the UAE, Chairman of Dubai Executive Council and Chairman of the Higher Committee for Future Technology Development and the Digital Economy, tweeted about the upcoming event yesterday.

Shaping the future

Sheikh Hamdan wrote: "We have directed the Dubai Future Foundation to organise Dubai Future Week from November 18 to 21, 2026. We want this annual event to become a defining milestone in shaping the future of humanity, and a distinctive global meeting point bringing together leaders, decision-makers, business leaders and entrepreneurs, alongside fuparticipants from across the world expected to attend turists, scientists and innovators from around the world.

10,000

Organised by Dubai Future Foundation, Dubai Future Week will take place across Emirates Towers and the Museum of the Future.

Its programme will feature keynote addresses, debates, fireside conversations, workshops, international challenges and competitions, idea pitches, exhibitions, immersive future experiences, closed-door discussions, specialist sessions, public activations and other formats designed to explore the forces shaping the decades ahead.

The focus will be not only on what is changing, but on how those changes will feel, whom they will serve and how they can improve daily life, a press release said.

Dubai Future Week will bring together more than 10,000 participants, including leading inventors, innovators, experts, investors, policymakers, entrepreneurs, technologists and specialists from critical and future-focused sectors around the world.
