

The Washington Post

Prices may vary in areas outside metropolitan Washington.

SU V1 V2 V3 V4

 T-storm in spots 87/70 • Tomorrow: T-storm 88/64 B6 Democracy Dies in Darkness FRIDAY, MAY 16, 2025 • $4

June D.C. parade will be rife with spectacle

Cost of week’s festivities to mark Army’s birthday could reach $45 million

BY OLIVIA GEORGE

A massive military parade and festivities planned in Washington next month will cost an estimated $25 million to $45 million and will involve dozens of warplanes, hundreds of Army vehicles and thousands of soldiers from across the country sleeping in downtown government office buildings, an Army spokesperson said Thursday.

The parade, to commemorate the U.S. Army’s 250th anniversary, will be held June 14, the same day as President Donald Trump’s 79th birthday, and will include representation from all active Army divisions, said Steve Warren, a spokesman for the branch.

The parade’s overlap with Trump’s birthday has stirred ire among some civilians and veterans, especially at a time when his overhaul of the federal government includes slashing the Department of Veterans Affairs.

The response from D.C.’s mayor, however, has been more muted than when Trump proposed a parade during his first term. The president has long mused about soldiers marching and tanks rolling down the streets of the capital and aircraft roaring overhead but backed off the idea in 2018 amid pushback from the Army and D.C.

SEE PARADE ON A5

GOP tax bill on track to add trillions to U.S. debt

Cost of Trump-backed plan comes with risks for its approval in Congress

BY JEFF STEIN

The Republican tax proposal emerging in the House of Representatives would add more than $2.5 trillion to federal deficits over the next decade, according to non-partisan estimates and budget experts.

That fiscal hit has triggered criticism from House conservatives, who have at times vowed to vote against legislation that adds to the national debt, which is already over $36 trillion. But House Speaker Mike Johnson (R-Louisiana) may have trouble reducing the bill’s price tag, as that would require either making fewer tax cuts or steeper spending cuts in ways unpalatable to his conference.

While the legislation is expected to change substantially before final passage, the House Ways and Means Committee’s draft plan calls for roughly $3.8 trillion in tax cuts over the next decade, according to the Joint Committee on Taxation, a nonpartisan congressional body. Other parts of the legislation would cut federal spending and

SEE DEFICIT ON A14

Medicaid: D.C. may have dodged deepest cut floated by GOP. B1

MATT MCCLAIN/THE WASHINGTON POST

Demonstrators protest outside the Supreme Court on Thursday as the court hears arguments about a proposed birthright citizenship ban.

Trump visit cements Persian Gulf role in AI boom

BY ELIZABETH DWOSKIN AND GERRIT DE VYNCK

Amid a flurry of dealmaking and fanfare on President Donald Trump’s Middle East trip this week, one theme was clear: The Persian Gulf states have cemented their role as key players in the artificial intelligence boom.

For all the talk of preventing China’s authoritarian government from dominating the AI industry, the deals put a different set of authoritarian countries squarely at the forefront of AI. The emirs and sheikhs of the gulf will be accessing, building and, most importantly, funding the technology in the coming years, side by side with U.S. companies.

The trend was well underway before Trump’s trip, but the president, hopping around the region with a coterie of tech billionaires, has accelerated and highlighted the shift.

On Thursday, OpenAI was in intense negotiations with two national champions in the United Arab Emirates, G42 and MGX, over a megadeal that would enable the San Francisco-based company to build data centers and develop its technology in the country, said three people familiar with the discussions who spoke on the condition of anonymity to describe nonpublic developments. In turn, OpenAI would receive new investments that would enable it to build U.S. data centers with a consortium of partners.

OpenAI declined to comment. The Washington Post has a content partnership with OpenAI.

AI chip developer Nvidia is set to sell hundreds of thousands of its most advanced chips to the UAE, The Post reported this week. Those sales would have been severely limited under rules former president Joe Biden had put in place, which the Trump administration scrapped last week just days before they were meant to go into effect.

Those UAE deals would come on top of billions of dollars’ worth

SEE AI ON A11

In Qatar: Trip reveals conflicts within Trump’s foreign policy. A10

Scope of court orders is tested

CITIZENSHIP AT BIRTH IS KEY ISSUE

President asks justices to limit national injunctions

BY ANN E. MARIMOW

The Supreme Court on Thursday grappled with whether to scale back nationwide orders that have blocked President Donald Trump’s ban on birthright citizenship, in a case with implications for judicial power and what it means to be an American.

After more than two hours of oral argument, it was unclear how the high court would resolve the issue, with some justices wary of the practical consequences of allowing the Trump administration to deny automatic citizenship for U.S.-born babies and the liberal justices suggesting that the policy is at odds with more than 100 years of the court’s rulings.

“The argument here is that the president is violating an established — not just one but, by my count, four established Supreme Court precedents,” said Justice Sonia Sotomayor, who suggested that lifting or limiting the nationwide orders would invite hundreds, potentially thousands, of individual lawsuits.

The case before the justices is something of a referendum on the use of nationwide injunctions that have frustrated many of Trump’s efforts to dramatically

SEE CITIZENSHIP ON A7

Ruling: Courts must widen scope in considering police use of force. A13

JOSHUA LOTT/THE WASHINGTON POST

Kenneth Davis spent 36 years as Cincinnati’s only Black general surgeon. He retired in 2020.

‘It feels like a hostile takeover’

Anti-DEI policies threaten scholarships for Black doctors in Cincinnati

BY EMMANUEL FELTON IN CINCINNATI

It took Kenneth Davis and his wife more than 20 years to raise the $1.4 million endowment they established for Black medical students entering the University of Cincinnati.

Davis had spent 36 years as the only Black general surgeon in Cincinnati before retiring in 2020. Now, according to the Cincinnati Medical Association, which represents Black doctors in the city, there are none. The scholarship, Davis hoped, would help grow the minuscule ranks of Black doctors in the region.

The endowment is now one of many across the country caught in the Trump administration’s campaign to dismantle federal diversity, equity and inclusion programs in Washington and pressuring corporations and universities to pull back from such efforts nationwide. The University of Cincinnati wants to make all students eligible for Davis’s scholarship, not just

SEE SCHOLARSHIPS ON A6

Praise, scrutiny for Leo’s handling of abuse cases

Survivors and scholars say the pope must commit to transparency. His record worries some groups.

BY KARIN BRULLIARD, SAMANTHA SCHMIDT, JONATHAN EDWARDS AND JONATHAN O’CONNELL

Even as Pope Leo XIV’s profile as a humble champion of the disenfranchised takes shape, a looming question is how he will approach the Catholic Church’s sexual abuse crisis while leading a global institution that has maintained secrecy and silence around its handling of claims against clergy.

Leo has assumed his role a dozen years after Pope Francis inherited a church roiled by clergy abuse scandals and then went on to devote more attention to the issue than his predecessors. But survivors and scholars say the new pontiff must urgently improve on Francis’s complicated legacy, pushing where he didn’t by robustly committing to transparency and accountability in investigations of harm.

“He’s a man of justice and a man who has cared for those who are marginalized, and certainly victims should be at the top of that list,” said Daniel Griffith, a Minneapolis priest and founding director of the Initiative on Restorative Justice and Healing at the University of St. Thomas. “There has been slow and steady movement forward. However, there is much more that needs to be done.”

Leo has not made any public statements about the sexual abuse crisis, though in past interviews he disavowed “cover-up and secrecy” and emphasized assistance for victims. One possible sign of an early focus on the issue came Wednesday, when the pope met with Cardinal Sean O’Malley, who heads the Vatican’s commission on the abuse of minors.

Experts and those who have worked with Leo during his lengthy tenure as priest, missionary, bishop and leader of an international order express confidence that he has the characteristics to accelerate progress — excellent listening skills, a canon law degree, experience suppressing an abusive Catholic movement in Peru.

Yet his record during those years, when he was known as Father Robert Prevost, has already faced scrutiny from some survivor groups. They say they are troubled by his ascent to the apex of the church, calling his oversight of two cases involving accused priests problematic.

In March, the U.S.-based Survivors Network of Those Abused by

SEE POPE ON A18

IN THE NEWS

Ukraine-Russia negotiations Secretary of State Marco Rubio said he didn’t expect a breakthrough after Moscow sent a low-level delegation for talks in Turkey. A10

Martin under investigation The outgoing interim U.S. attorney in D.C. said the ethics probe he faces was improperly disclosed. B1

THE NATION The defense in Diddy’s trial cast witness Cassie as consenting to drugs and “freak-offs.” A2
More than 500 Voice of America contractors are expected to lose their jobs this month. A5

THE WORLD British researchers discovered a rare original Magna Carta in Harvard’s archives. A8
Israel has ramped up attacks in Gaza during the U.S. president’s tour of the Middle East. A9

THE ECONOMY Start-ups betting on new engines could help keep the United States’ military edge and close the hypersonic missile gap with China. A12
U.S. regulators are preparing to ease rules for certain financial buffers that banks use to absorb losses. A13

THE REGION D.C.’s budget remains in limbo as the city waits for the U.S. House to reverse course on spending cuts. B1
Officials at the National Park Service found a new operator to take control of the Rock Creek Park Horse Center. B1

STYLE Kennedy Center staffers said they plan to form a union in response to layoffs and a lack of transparency. C1

WEEKEND Nine music events in the D.C. region that bring people together to the tune of punk, jazz, go-go and EDM.

BUSINESS NEWS.....A12
COMICS.....C5
OBITUARIES.....B4
OPINION PAGES.....A15
TELEVISION.....C4
WORLD NEWS.....A8

CONTENT © 2025
The Washington Post
Year 148, No. 54218

0 170628 211001 3