

Chicago Tribune

$4.00 | THURSDAY, JUNE 18, 2026 | CHICAGOTRIBUNE.COM

Trump signs Iran truce

Peace deal calls for waiver on sanctions, reopening of strait

By Michelle L. Price, Matthew Lee, Jon Gambrell, Sammy Magdy and Mike Catalini
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Donald Trump said he signed an agreement with Iran on Wednesday that U.S. officials say calls for Tehran to dilute its stockpile of highly enriched uranium and waive sanctions on the country, immediately allowing Iran to sell its oil freely in a major concession from Washington.

Pakistani Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif, who helped mediate the deal to end the war, said it is taking “immediate effect” after leaders from both countries signed it, but that there will still be a formal signing ceremony Friday.

The agreement would open the Strait of Hormuz toll-free for two months and affirm a commitment to Lebanon’s territorial integrity in the face of Israel’s invasion against the Iran-backed Hezbollah militant group, according to officials from both countries.

U.S. officials dictated draft language to journalists after days of secrecy, speaking on condition of anonymity. Iranian state TV later released text that

See IRAN on Page A2

■ Higher consumer prices will linger even if war in Iran ends, some experts caution.
Nation & World, Page B6

Agent of change?

By Andrew Carter
CHICAGO TRIBUNE

The threads connecting the Obama Presidential Center to Hyde Park and the South Side began with a hopeful want ad from a Chicago organizer and piqued interest from a recent college graduate searching for something more. It was 1985 and Jerry Kellman needed help. Barack Obama needed a deeper purpose.

And so began a chain of events that changed American history and led to this moment of anticipation on the South Side. The Obama center opens Friday on a sprawling Jackson Park campus, and arrives with the kind of optimism that defined his first presidential campaign.

Almost 20 years ago, that campaign became synonymous with the ideals of hope and change. The former punctuated Shepard Fairey’s famous poster. The latter appeared in the official campaign motto: “Change we can believe in.” Now the presidential center aspires to be a catalyst on

The South Side shaped Barack Obama. The hope for many is that his presidential center will reshape the South Side

Alfred Coleman, above, brings his granddaughters, Peyton, 12, and Alyah, 4, to peek at the Obama Presidential Center on June 8 in Chicago’s Jackson Park. BRIAN CASSELLA/TRIBUNE

the South Side, where change can sometimes be slow, and hope hard to come by.

As the opening approached, workers in recent weeks raced to complete the final touches. Fresh sod and newly planted trees line 19 acres filled with event spaces, parks, indoor basketball courts and a public library. The 225-foot-high granite tower at the figurative center of it all, home to a museum, took almost five years to rise over Stony Island Avenue.

In another way, though, the center has been 41 years in the making, with a foundation built atop that old classified ad. Kellman placed it in a monthly called “Community Jobs.” Obama saw it — he called the publication “a do-gooder rag,” Kellman later learned — in the New York Public Library.

He recently recalled the origin story over breakfast at Manny’s, the South Loop cafeteria and deli Obama often frequented during his 2008 run to the

See CHANGE on Page A7

INSIDE

JOHN J. KIM/CHICAGO TRIBUNE

For Splitter and Bulls, a tall task

When Tiago Splitter debuts with on the Bulls’ sideline this fall, he will become the second-tallest head coach in the history of the NBA, reflecting how few former big men successfully rise through the ranks of the league after their playing careers end. Sports

Suburban police killing settlement: The family of a man shot by Elk Grove Village police will receive millions from the municipality, but mayor doubles down on defending cops. Chicagoland, Page A6

ILLINOIS PRISONER REVIEW BOARD

State panel made over, still draws GOP ire

Confirmation hearing reveals the divide over criminal justice reform

By Jeremy Gorner
CHICAGO TRIBUNE

SPRINGFIELD — Four new members of the Illinois Prisoner Review Board began work Monday on a panel whose controversial early-release decisions have repeatedly tested Gov. JB Pritzker politically and whose most consequential decision led to the homicide of an 11-year-old Chicago boy.

The new members of the 15-member board, now occu-

Stephanie Love-Patterson exits after meeting with state senators during a hearing for the Illinois Prisoner Review Board at the State Capitol on May 28 in Springfield. JOHN J. KIM/CHICAGO TRIBUNE piated with only 13 members, bring backgrounds in anti-domestic violence advocacy, probation, law enforcement and the clergy. Their appointments by Pritzker, confirmed by the Democratic-controlled Illinois Senate earlier this month, come as the governor seeks a rare third term and as he has faced scrutiny over the board and its decisions.

The panel’s recent history is difficult to separate from its present. In March 2024, the board granted early release to Crosetti Brand, a man with a documented history of violence against women. Authorities say he later attacked a pregnant former girlfriend and killed her 11-year-old son, Jayden Perkins, when the boy tried to come to his mother’s aid. Brand, now 40, was sentenced to life in prison. Jayden’s family has filed

See BOARD on Page A2

‘BROADVIEW SIX’ CASE

Judge asked to appoint special counsel to probe US Attorney’s Office

By Jason Meisner
CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Lawyers for the “Broadview Six” late Tuesday asked a federal judge to appoint special counsel to investigate alleged wrongdoing by the U.S. attorney’s office — and possibly prosecute for contempt of court.

The 27-page motion said the investigation should focus on prosecutors’ conduct “during the grand jury proceedings and the ensuing cover-up before this court” and should include everyone who touched the case, including U.S. Attorney Andrew Boutros, his top deputies, and possibly his supervisors at the Department of Justice.

“Indeed, these steps must be taken in large part because of what appears to be a determined effort to blame a single prosecutor when the misconduct now known...runs much deeper and indeed to the highest levels of the Chicago U.S. Attorney’s Office and likely to the Department of Justice in Washington D.C.,” the motion stated.

The motion warned U.S. District Judge April Perry that if a special prosecutor was not able to dig deeper, blame for the collapse of

See PROBE on Page A4

SUBSCRIPTION

Visit myaccount.chicagotribune.com or call 312-546-7900 to sign up for a subscription. To place an ad, visit placeanad.chicagotribune.com.

WEATHER FORECAST

TODAY H:76 L:58 FRI. H:77 L:61 SAT. H:80 L:62
Complete details on Page A14

INDEX

Almanac A11 Crossword B13
Arts & Living B7 Editorials A8
Comics B12-B13 Horoscope B12
Nation & World B4
Obituaries A11
Television B11

179th year No. 169
© Chicago Tribune

