

Rachel needed a hug. Instead Starmmer sucked her dry to shore up his own position like the political vampire he is

SARAH VINE

What – or who – caused the tears that sparked turmoil in the markets?

■ Reeves weeps as PM fails to back her in House

■ Claims of angry bust-up with Rayner before PMQs

■ Chancellor admits: 'I'm under so much pressure'

RACHEL Reeves sent markets tumbling yesterday after a tearful breakdown fuelled speculation she is on her way out.

The Chancellor wept in the Commons chamber as stunned MPs looked on.

It was just moments after admitting that she was feeling the pressure following a series of humiliating U-turns.

TV cameras captured brutal

By Jason Groves
Political Editor

footage of the self-styled 'Iron Chancellor' wiping away tears as Sir Keir Starmer ducked questions about whether she is safe in her job.

The pound fell sharply and the Government's borrowing costs jumped as rumours swirled that she could be heading for the exit, taking Labour's remaining fiscal credibility with her. Downing Street

Turn to Page 4

Wounded: Tearful Rachel Reeves' face is a mask of utter misery yesterday in the Commons