

My mother gave me away to her cleaner's sister at six weeks old

SEE PAGES 29-31

SECRET AFGHAN AIRLIFT

THANKS FOR SAVING US, NOW WE'LL SUE YOU

Scandal takes bleakly predictable twist as ambulance-chasing lawyers cash in

In mother's footsteps: Prince in Angola yesterday

Harry's minefield tribute to Diana

SEE PAGES 2-3

TAXPAYERS face a potential £1billion bill as law firms race to cash in following the Afghan data disaster.

Legal companies have begun

By Mark Nicol, David Williams and Sam Greenhill

signing up thousands of claimants who could, it is claimed, pocket up to £250,000 each in compensation.

The Government admitted

100,000 Afghans had been left 'at risk of death' from the Taliban by a catastrophic leak of a database of those who had applied to the UK for sanctuary. There were fears it would be used as a 'kill list'.

As exclusively discovered by the

Turn to Page 6