As thousands of REAL criminals go uninvestigated, two detectives call on a grandmother. Her 'crime'? She went on Facebook to criticise Labour councillors at centre of the 'Hope you die' WhatsApp scandal exposed by the MoS

COME OUT, IT'S THE THOUGHT POLICE

IN A chilling clampdown on free speech, two police officers pay a visit to a grandmother – simply for criticising Labour politicians on Facebook.

Detectives were last night accused of acting like East Germany's feared Stasi secret police for quizzing Helen Jones over her calls for the resignation of local councillors embroiled in the WhatsApp scandal exposed by The Mail on Sunday.

Police conceded that the 54-year-old had committed no crime – yet Mrs Jones says she has effectively been silenced by the officers, as she was intimidated by them calling at her door and is too terrified to post on social media again.

'It was actually quite scary. It made me think I best just keep quiet for the rest of my life,
