

The Boston Globe

Serving our community since 1872

MONDAY, JUNE 2, 2025

Traversing tariffs' front lines, on a bike

Tiny Vt. company takes on Trump in an existential battle over trade policy

By Jim Puzzanghera
GLOBE STAFF

This spring, Terry Precision Cycling of Burlington, Vt., was preparing to roll out the 40-year-old company's latest advance in gear specially designed for women: the Caicos Bike Short.

"Made of a luxurious Italian fabric that feels like butter against the skin, this short provides exceptional comfort in addition to targeted compression," Terry Precision boasted on its website. "Plus, we've outfitted the Caicos with our Flex Air Tour chamois, designed to keep you comfortable on the longest distances and epic climbs."

But one element about the new high-performance apparel quickly began to financially chafe: It's made in China.

Although Terry Precision Cycling manufactures much of its merchandise in Spokane, Wash., it also imports materials and finished goods from China, Taiwan, Vietnam, El Salvador, Italy, and the Philippines, ►Economic advisers take hard-line stance on pending tariffs. A2.

said Nik Holm, its president. President Trump has sharply increased tariffs on all those countries, creating what Holm called "an existential threat" to his company.

So he decided to join four other US businesses in filing a lawsuit challenging the legality of those tar-

TARIFFS, Page A10

Ukraine attacks far realms of Russia

Drones strike bases from Siberia to western border in audacious operation

By Maria Varenikova
and Anastasia Kuznietsova
NEW YORK TIMES

KYIV — Ukraine on Sunday launched one of its broadest assaults of the war against air bases inside Russia, a coordinated operation that targeted sites from eastern Siberia to Russia's western border and that left several Russian aircraft in flames.

The Ukrainian drone attacks on Russian airfields came as Kyiv suffered a damaging blow of its own Sunday, with Russia striking a Ukrainian military training base and killing at least 12 soldiers.

The day's violence showed that the fighting between the two adversaries was only escalating even as they were expected to sit down for another round of cease-fire negotiations Monday in Istanbul. Russian forces have quickened the pace of their advances in Ukraine and bombarded Ukrainian cities, as Ukrainian leaders accuse Russia of stalling for time in the peace talks and Moscow pushes for a breakthrough in the conflict after more than three years.

Russia's Defense Ministry said Sunday that Ukrainian drones had attacked airfields in five regions stretching across five time zones. Several air-

UKRAINE, Page A6

As nonprofits struggle, city may pay price

Efforts to raise payments in lieu of taxes might falter

By Niki Griswold
GLOBE STAFF

For decades, one of Boston's points of pride has also posed a dilemma for City Hall: The same world-renowned universities, hospitals, and museums that make the city a global hub for innovation, culture, and education are exempt by state law from paying property taxes, which the city heavily relies on to fund its budget.

Over the years, city officials have tried to get the most prominent tax-exempt institutions — Harvard, Boston University, Northeastern, and Massachusetts General Hospital, among others — to pony up more to offset the cost of city services they use. Just last year, Mayor Michelle Wu said she intends to overhaul the formal program under which those institutions make voluntary payments to the city, aiming to entice more money from those nonprofits long term.

Recently, however, President Trump's siege on

NONPROFITS, Page A7

Fury, questions follow ICE arrest of student

A day of commencement celebration turns to protest in Milford

By Dan Glaun
and Tonya Alanez
GLOBE STAFF

MILFORD — Marcelo Gomes Da Silva was expected to perform with the Milford High School band at the school's commencement on Sunday. Instead, as his bandmates played for those walking across the stage, Gomes remained locked up by immigration officials after being detained Saturday while headed to volleyball practice.

The 18-year-old's detention by federal immigration officers sparked a post-commencement protest Sunday, with more than 1,000 demonstrators at Milford Town Hall lining the sidewalk and waving signs condemning ICE and calling for Gomes's release.

A tear ran down the cheek of an 11-year-old cousin of Marcelo Gomes Da Silva at the rally.

"Hands off our kids," they chanted.

Friends, school officials, advocates, and local politicians spoke out against the detainment of Gomes, a high school junior who has attended Milford Public Schools most of his childhood.

Gomes has since been taken to ICE's detention center in Burlington. The agency plans to transfer him to Plymouth, said Diego Low, director of Metrowest Worker Center, an immigration advocacy group based in Framingham.

It is not known what grounds

STUDENT, Page A7

PHOTOS BY JESSICA RINALDI/GLOBE STAFF

Family and classmates of Marcelo Gomes Da Silva embraced as they protested outside of Milford Town Hall Sunday.

Glowing for the gold

Monday: More sun.
High 68-73, low 52-57.
Tuesday: Mostly sun.
High 69-74, low 57-62.
Sunrise: 5:09. Sunset: 8:15.
Comics and weather, D4-5.
Obituaries, C9.

VOL. 307, NO. 153

Suggested retail price
$4.00

Herbert Wilkins has died. The former chief justice of the Supreme Judicial court was considered a leader in protecting individual rights. B1.

The MBTA Transit Police chief lashed out at the Suffolk district attorney after a federal jury convicted an officer of helping to cover up the beating of a homeless man. B1.

Six people were injured in what the FBI called a "terror attack" at an Israeli hostage awareness event in Colorado. A2.

On South Coast, cautious hopes for tourism

Economic uncertainty could actually increase visitors from region

By Omar Mohammed
GLOBE STAFF

FAIRHAVEN — The Delano Homestead Bed and Breakfast sits on a tree-lined street in the center of the historic village right across from Fairhaven Town Hall, the 19th-century French Gothic building where Mark Twain is said to have given a speech.

It's the kind of neighborhood tourists love to find in New England, one that attracts visitors to the region, especially in summer.

"People will come and spend, let's say, four days and go to Cape Cod for a day, go to Martha's Vineyard for a day, stay local for a day, and go to Newport for a day," said Paul Beauchamp, owner of Fairhaven's Delano Homestead, which at one point was owned by the family of America's 32nd president, Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

But in a time of economic uncertainty in Massachusetts and the country, there is anecdotal evidence of people pulling back, even as some tourism officials are optimistic.

Beauchamp said his bed and breakfast saw a slight slow-

SOUTH COAST, Page A10

DAVID L. RYAN/GLOBE STAFF

A rising appreciation for local history could also bolster such sites as Fort Phoenix State Reservation in Fairhaven.