LABOUR'S DEFENCE SPENDING RETREAT

As key military review is published, Minister accused of U-turn on crucial funding pledge

By Mark Nicol Defence Editor

LABOUR was accused of an embarrassing U-turn last night after appearing to water down a crucial military spending pledge.

Ahead of a long-awaited defence review being published today, the Defence Secretary rowed back on a commitment to spend 3 per cent of GDP on national security by 2034.

Just 72 hours after giving an interview in which he said Britain

'will spend' such an amount 'in the next Parliament', John Healey yesterday downgraded it to a mere 'ambition'.

Sir Keir Starmer will today launch the Government's Strategic Defence Review from a UK dockyard, following many months of work and lobbying by military chiefs.

But critics warn the ten-year plan is likely to prove unaffordable without a hike to 3 per cent. A Nato summit
