Deadliest night in Gaza since the ceasefire

TRUMP: TRUCE WILL HOLD, ISRAEL SHOULD HIT BACK IF TROOPS KILLED

Israeli airstrikes killed more than 100 people across Gaza yesterday in the deadliest escalation since the ceasefire took effect on October 10, marking the most serious challenge yet to the fragile truce between Israel and Hamas.

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said he had ordered the military to carry out "powerful strikes" after accusing Hamas of violating the ceasefire. The militant group denied the charge and said it would delay handing over the body of another hostage in response.

The strikes followed the killing of an Israeli soldier during an exchange of gunfire in Rafah, southern Gaza.

US President Donald Trump, currently on an Asia tour, defended Israel's actions, saying the country was justified in retaliating.

Trump warns Hamas

"Israel should hit back when its troops come under attack," he told reporters aboard Air Force One, while insisting the ceasefire would hold because "Hamas is a very small part of the overall Middle East peace. And they have to behave. If not, they will be terminated."

Mediator Qatar said it expected the ceasefire to hold despite what it described as a "violation."

"Fortunately, I think the main parties — both of them — are acknowledging that the ceasefire should hold and they should stick to the agreement," said Qatari

Gaza's civil defence agency said the Israeli strikes killed at least 104 people, including 46 children, within 12 hours.

"At least 104 fatalities were brought to hospitals, including 46 children and a number of women and elderly," said Mahmud Bassal, a spokesperson for the agency.

Ambulances and small trucks carrying bodies crowded hospital entrances overnight across Gaza.

"They struck right next to us, and we saw all the rubble on top of us and our young ones," said a woman outside one hospital.

"What kind of a ceasefire is this?" asked Amna Qrinawi.

At Al Awda Hospital, scores of people gathered around dozens of bodies wrapped in white shrouds for funeral prayers. Family members wept as they bade farewell to their loved ones.

Yehya Eid, who said he lost his brother and nephews, wept over a small body in a bloodied shroud outside the hospital. "These are children who were killed. What did they do wrong? Did they fight in the war?" he said.
