

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL.

DOW JONES | News Corp *****

WEDNESDAY, JULY 30, 2025 ~ VOL. CCLXXXVI NO. 25

WSJ.com

★★★★ $5.00

DJIA 44632.99 ▼ 204.57 0.46%

NASDAQ 21098.29 ▼ 0.4%

STOXX 600 550.58 ▲ 0.3%

10-YR. TREAS. ▲ 22/32, yield 4.329%

OIL $69.21 ▲ $2.50

GOLD $3,323.40 ▲ $14.30

EURO $1.1547

YEN 148.48

What's News

Business & Finance

- ◆ The $71.5 billion merger deal between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern creates a single company controlling coast-to-coast rail shipments for the first time in U.S. history. A1
- ◆ Shares of Novo Nordisk plunged after the Danish company that boomed on weight-loss drugs forecast a gloomier future in the face of competition from knock-offs and rival Eli Lilly. A1
- ◆ Major U.S. stock indexes fell after a U.S.-China meeting on a tariff-truce extension ended without a deal. The S&P 500, Dow and Nasdaq shed 0.3%, 0.5% and 0.4%, respectively. B11
- ◆ Starbucks said same-store sales fell for the sixth consecutive quarter and that a decline in orders offset higher average ticket prices. B1
- ◆ JPMorgan Chase is in advanced talks to take over Apple's credit-card program from Goldman Sachs after negotiations accelerated in recent months. B1
- ◆ Palo Alto Networks is in talks to acquire Israeli cybersecurity provider CyberArk Software in what would mark one of the biggest tech takeovers so far this year. B1
- ◆ Spotify gained subscribers in the second quarter but swung to a loss as the company booked higher personnel, professional-services and marketing costs. B3
- ◆ UnitedHealth said its earnings will plunge this year to a level below Wall Street's lowered expectations, highlighting rising costs and operational shortfalls across the business. B1

World-Wide

- ◆ The gunman who killed four people in a Manhattan office building left a suicide note saying he believed he had CTE, a brain disease associated with head injuries, and he blamed the National Football League. A1, A4
- ◆ Wesley LePatner, a star in Blackstone's real-estate business and one of the investment firm's highest-ranking women, was killed in Monday's attack. A4
- ◆ The Gaza Strip is experiencing famine conditions, global food-insecurity experts said, a dire assessment of the enclave's deepening hunger crisis. A7
- ◆ The Senate confirmed former Trump defense attorney Emil Bove to a federal appeals court over the objections of Democrats who accused him of acting unethically and abusing his power. A3
- ◆ The Trump administration took a swing at toppling a landmark scientific finding on greenhouse-gas emissions that the government has used to regulate them. A1
- ◆ Ghislaine Maxwell won't answer questions about Jeffrey Epstein unless Congress meets several conditions or Trump grants her clemency, her lawyer said. A5
- ◆ U.S. and Chinese trade negotiators discussed potentially extending a tariff truce, senior administration officials said, but didn't come to an agreement. A2
- ◆ The Justice Department fired two of its most senior antitrust enforcers after internal disagreements over how much discretion their division should have. A3

CONTENTS	Opinion..... A13-15
Arts in Review..... A11	Personal Journal A9-10
Business & Finance B2-3	Property Report.... B6
Crossword..... A12	Sports..... A12
Heard on Street..... B12	Technology..... B4
Market Data..... B9	U.S. News..... A2-6
Markets..... B11	World News..... A7, A16

© 2025 Dow Jones & Company, Inc. All Rights Reserved

NYPD/JUMA PRESS (2)

A closed-circuit TV image, which the Journal verified with police, showed the gunman entering 345 Park Ave. with a rifle.

As Gunman Stalked Building, Workers Hid, Erected Barriers

Rampage killer of four in Manhattan leaves note blaming NFL for head injuries

Jon Ferrer was working late Monday evening, reviewing tax returns and trying to get a head start on the week.

By Mark Maurer, Miriam Gottfried and Andrew Beaton

The KPMG senior tax associate says he heard a faint alarm when he was in the bathroom, but thought nothing of it.

Then an associate walked over to his desk and gave him the horrifying news: There was an active shooter in their office building. “My heart sank to my stomach,” Ferrer said.

He was ushered into a partner's office with about 15 co-workers, as colleagues pushed a desk across the door and put blankets up on windows in the room. They sat together in a circle.

As a gunman rampaged through 345 Park Ave., a nightmare unfolded for the thousands of employees who work at the landmark New York office tower, which is home to prestigious firms such as private-equity giant Blackstone and KPMG, as well as the National Football League.

In the end, four people were killed—an off-duty police officer, a security guard, a senior Blackstone executive and a real-estate firm employee—while others were hospitalized with injuries. The shooter, 27-year-old Shane Tamura, from Las Vegas, left a suicide note saying he believed he had had chronic traumatic encephalopathy, a brain disease associated with head injuries, and he was blaming the NFL.

The center of Manhattan is populated with fancy hotels and office towers like 345 Park Ave. that house banks, hedge funds, law and accounting firms, most of them under strict security protocols that restrict access to buildings. The appearance of security plus a reputation as a lower-

Please turn to page A4

- ◆ Blackstone executive killed in shooting..... A4
- ◆ From high-school football standout to mass killer... A4

Why the Fighting in Gaza Won't Stop

With hunger crisis taking hold, neither Israel nor Hamas seem ready to end war

By DOV LIEBER AND SHAYNDI RAICE

TEL AVIV—Israel wrapped up its campaign against Iran in 12 days. It finished its fight with the Lebanese Shiite militia Hezbollah in two months. But after nearly two years of fighting, Israel's war in Gaza continues.

More than 60,000 Palestinians have been killed, according to the Gazan health ministry. A deadly hunger crisis has taken hold. Many of the roughly two million people trapped inside Gaza struggle daily to find food, shelter and medical care. Vast swaths of the Strip have been reduced to mounds of concrete and rebar.

The violence and hunger have eroded Israel's standing on the global stage. In the U.S. and Europe, large portions of the population have turned against the country. U.K. Prime Minister Keir Starmer said Tuesday that the U.K. would recognize a Palestinian state in September unless Israel takes “substantive steps” to end the war in Gaza, following a similar pledge by France.

Inside Israel, polls show a majority of Israelis say it is time for the war to end, as they watch the number of Israeli troops and hostages killed in Gaza rise. Many exhausted Israeli soldiers agree.

The strategic goals of the warring parties, however, seem nearly un-

Please turn to page A8

- ◆ Israel weighs its next steps..... A7

Merger To Create Pan-U.S. Railroad

Union Pacific to buy Norfolk Southern in $71.5 billion deal that needs regulatory OK

By ESTHER FUNG

The $71.5 billion merger deal between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern joins 50,000 miles of railroad tracks that span from the Jersey shore to the ports in California.

The union, announced Tuesday, would create a single company controlling coast-to-coast rail shipments for the first time in U.S. history—a feat Union Pacific says would speed up shipping and make supply chains more efficient.

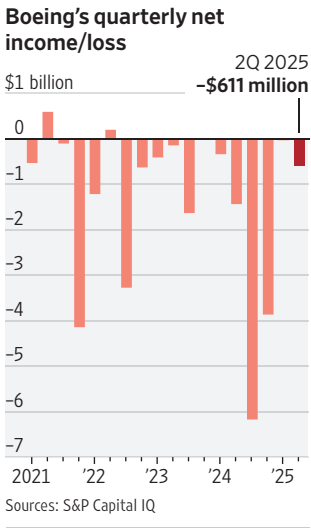

“Railroads have been an integral part of building America since the Industrial Revolution, and this transaction is the next step in advancing the industry,” said Union Pacific Chief Executive Officer Jim Vena, architect of the plan.

Union Pacific agreed to acquire Norfolk Southern in a stock and cash deal that prices Norfolk at $320 per share, with an equity value of $71.5 billion. Including assumed debt, the deal gives Norfolk an enterprise value of $85 billion. The deal still requires regulatory approval from the Surface Transportation Board. The board's new chairman, Patrick Fuchs, has said he plans to expedite rulings and legal decisions.

Please turn to page A6

Boeing Posts Narrower Loss

Brisk plane deliveries lifted Boeing to its best quarterly performance since 2023. B1

Ozempic Maker's Headwinds Sink Stock

By PETER LOFTUS AND DOMINIC CHOPPING

Shares of Novo Nordisk plunged Tuesday after the Danish company that boomed on weight-loss drugs forecast a gloomier future in the face of blistering competition from knockoffs and giant rival Eli Lilly.

Novo Nordisk stock fell as much as 30%, at one point wiping out almost $93 billion of its market capitalization, after the drugmaker said headwinds for its blockbuster drugs Ozempic and Wegovy would cut its sales growth for the year, the latest in a series of challenges facing the once-highflying company. The shares closed down 23% in Copenhagen.

Novo, which once helped carve out the multibillion-dollar anti-obesity market, is

Please turn to page A6

- ◆ Switching weight-loss drugs could hurt care.... A9

INSIDE

SPORTS
Baseball's 'spot-fixing' investigation now includes Cleveland's star closer. A12

WORLD NEWS
A drug you haven't heard of is killing hundreds of people every year. A16

The Criminal Enterprise Run by Monkeys

Cabal of furry thieves at a temple in Bali swipe iPhones—and trade them for mangos

By HANNAH MIAO

PECATU, Indonesia—At a cliff-side temple on the tropical island of Bali, an unexpected group of criminals is running one of the world's most sophisticated scam operations.

Every week, they steal dozens of phones, wallets and other valuables from tourists in broad daylight and exchange them for handsome rewards. It's been going on for decades and nobody's been able to stop it.

The culprits? Long-tailed macaques. “The monkeys have taken

Please turn to page A8

EPA Moves to Rescind A Landmark Finding On Greenhouse Gases

By SCOTT PATTERSON AND ERIC NILLER

WASHINGTON—The Trump administration is taking a big swing at toppling a landmark scientific finding on greenhouse-gas emissions that the government has used to regulate emissions from power plants, aircraft, cars and more.

The Environmental Protection Agency said Tuesday that it is seeking to rescind what is known as the government's endangerment finding. The 2009 declaration states that greenhouse gases threaten public health and welfare by raising global temperatures, increasing the likelihood of heat waves, more intense hurricanes and storms with heavy rainfall.

The EPA said the endangerment finding has been used to justify $1 trillion in regulations, though it didn't provide details behind that figure. By rescinding the finding, the agency would “end 16 years of uncertainty for automakers and American consumers,” EPA administrator Lee Zeldin said.

In a 302-page proposal to rescind the declaration, the administration argues that the original 2009 finding was “unduly pessimistic” regarding increases in greenhouse gas emissions and global temperatures, which it said peaked in the 1930s and have remained relatively stable since then.

But data collected by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration—and the EPA itself—contradict that claim, finding that average global atmospheric temperatures are at their highest level since record keeping began in the 1850s. Despite mounting public attention to extreme weather, such events haven't increased relative to historical highs, the EPA proposal states.

Concentrations of greenhouse gases, such as carbon dioxide and methane that trap the sun's energy and warm the atmosphere, are at their highest level in 800,000 years, according to the EPA's website, which notes the temperature records contained in ice cores,

Please turn to page A5