

The Washington Post

Prices may vary in areas outside metropolitan Washington.

SU V1 V2 V3 V4

Partly sunny 51/35 • Tomorrow: Sunny 54/44 B6

Democracy Dies in Darkness

TUESDAY, APRIL 8, 2025 • $4

OKSANA PARAFENIUK/FOR THE WASHINGTON POST

Funeral attendees mourn Alina Kutsenko and Danylo Nikitskyi, 15-year-olds who had just started dating, in Kryvyi Rih, Ukraine.

Strike on playground shatters a city

Russian attack in Kryvyi Rih is the worst against children since it launched its full-scale war

BY LIZZIE JOHNSON
AND SERHII KOROLCHUK
IN KRYVYI RIH, UKRAINE

The priests arrived at the children's playground with a teddy bear, swinging incense and chanting the names of the nine children who died here on Friday.

Tymofii Tsvitok, the 3-year-old who loved hunting for ladybugs. Alina Kutsenko and Danylo Nikitskyi, 15-year-olds who had just started dating, telling their friends that it was serious. Herman Tripolets, a 9-year-old who had recently presented a book report at school on one of his favorite reads, about a fantastical land for children — only to enter, they had to sacrifice a memory.

Three days had passed since Russia struck the playground with a ballistic missile, killing 20 people, among them nine children, and injuring 90, in what the United Nations Commission on Human Rights said was the worst attack on juveniles since the beginning of Russia's full-scale invasion.

Decried by leaders around the world, what happened here at first drew a muted response from the United States. U.S. Ambassador to Ukraine Bridget A. Brink initially did not mention Russia's role in the strike before changing course on Sunday,

SEE UKRAINE ON A11

High court lifts hold on Venezuelan deportations

But the justices also say detainees must be given due process rights

BY JUSTIN JOUVENAL
AND ANN E. MARIMOW

A divided Supreme Court on Monday cleared the way for the Trump administration to use a controversial wartime authority to deport alleged members of a Venezuelan gang, but said detainees must first have an opportunity to challenge their deportations.

The 5-4 ruling did not touch on the underlying legal questions about the government's use of the Alien Enemies Act, one of the most high-profile and contentious immigration enforcement actions so far in President Donald Trump's second term.

Instead, the majority ruled that the five Venezuelan immigrants who challenged the policy did so in the wrong court, leaving open the possibility that those targeted for deportation could refile their case in Texas or other jurisdictions where they are detained.

"The detainees are confined in Texas, so venue is improper in the District of Columbia," the justices wrote of the challenge in U.S. District Court in D.C. "As a result, the

SEE DEPORTATION ON A9

Return delayed: Court hits pause on order to bring back Md. man. A4

LEANDRO LOZADA/AFP/GETTY IMAGES

Storms submerge central U.S.

A flooded street Monday in Frankfort, Kentucky. Days of heavy rains left parts of the central United States underwater, with some areas receiving more than a foot of precipitation. The deadly storms have diminished, but there is a risk that water levels will continue to rise in the coming days as rivers crest.

This time, a muted measles response

BY LAUREN WEBER,
LENA H. SUN,
FENIT NIRAPPIL
AND RACHEL ROUBEIN

Six years ago, as measles outbreaks cropped up across the country, President Donald Trump was asked what parents should do. "They have to get the shots," he said. "The vaccinations are so important."

On Sunday, Trump was asked

In Trump's first term, officials touted vaccines; now RFK Jr. is in charge about the growing measles outbreak in Texas and New Mexico. "It's so far a fairly small number of people," he said, though the outbreaks were similar in size at the time of both interviews. "This is not something new."

Two children have died of measles-related complications, and a third death has been linked to the infection so far this year. No one died in the 2019 outbreaks.

Public health experts and former officials are bemoaning the current lack of action, noting the clear difference between the government's response then and now.

SEE MEASLES ON A4

Trump open to tariff deals, but no delay

THREATENS NEW DUTIES AS CHINA RESPONDS

Markets stabilize somewhat on hopes of agreements

BY JEFF STEIN,
AARON GREGG
AND TAYLOR TELFORD

President Donald Trump on Monday signaled that he was open to cutting deals with countries around the world to ease tariffs, partially stabilizing markets that have been rattled by an intensifying trade war.

While Trump and many White House advisers continued to suggest there would be no quick end to new import duties, the president also fueled optimism that deals with individual countries could avert worst-case economic scenarios. Major stock indexes closed largely flat after sinking for several consecutive days since the White House unveiled major new tariffs last week.

After a dizzying session, the S&P 500 ended down just 0.2 percent Monday, while the tech-heavy Nasdaq composite index was barely positive. The Dow Jones Industrial Average, which contains just 30 stocks, closed down just shy of 1 percent.

"We're going to get fair deals and good deals with every country. And if we don't, we're going to have nothing to do with them," Trump said in a joint Oval Office appearance with Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu. "They're not going to be allowed

SEE TARIFFS ON A15

Weekend in Florida: As markets tumbled, Trump played golf. A13

On the table: Some governments offer to drop levies against U.S. A14

CEOs, boosters express doubts over trade war

Pundits, GOP legislators among Trump allies beginning to speak out

BY CAT ZAKRZEWSKI,
SARAH ELLISON
AND THEODORIC MEYER

As the world reels from President Donald Trump's trade war, JP Morgan CEO Jamie Dimon is alerting shareholders that the tariffs will "slow down growth." Podcaster Ben Shapiro is warning that the president's vision of international trade is "mistaken." And Sen. Ted Cruz (R-Texas) is advising that the tariff strategy carries "enormous risk."

Trump's tariffs are increasingly alienating some of the corporate titans, influencers and even Republican lawmakers who served as his biggest boosters, as the president plows ahead with a trade strategy that has prompted wild swings in the markets. The criticism is an early sign that the economic turmoil caused by his trade war could leave lasting political scars for Trump, who doubled down on the strategy by threatening new tariffs against China on Monday morning.

The chiding marks a departure from the general acquiescence among Trump's allies during the first 2½ months of his shock-and-awe presidency. Influential leaders in many spheres largely remained silent or cautiously supported the White House as it slashed the federal workforce, strained alliances with Europe and unleashed an immigration

SEE PUSHBACK ON A16

The Fix: Panic sets in for some of Trump's billionaire allies. A7

Leading voice: Sen. Rand Paul (R) pushes back on tariff policies. A16

As Social Security site crashes, DOGE slashes

Musk's team pushes to downsize the agency's IT staff amid tech issues

BY LISA REIN,
HANNAH NATANSON
AND ELIZABETH DWOSKIN

Retirees and disabled people are facing chronic website outages and other access problems as they attempt to log in to their online Social Security accounts, even as they are being directed to do more of their business with the agency online.

The website has crashed repeatedly in recent weeks, with outages lasting anywhere from 20 minutes to almost a day, according to six current and former officials with knowledge of the issues. Even when the site is back online, many customers have not been able to sign in to their accounts — or have logged in only to find information missing. For others, access to the system has been slow, requiring repeated tries to get in.

The problems come as the Trump administration's cost-cutting team, led by Elon Musk, has imposed a downsizing that's led to 7,000 job cuts and is preparing to push out thousands more employees at an agency that serves 73 million Americans. The new demands from Musk's U.S. DOGE Service include a 50 percent cut to the technology division responsible for the website and other electronic access.

SEE SOCIAL SECURITY ON A6

IN THE NEWS

Conflicting messages President Donald Trump said the United States is holding direct nuclear talks with Iran, just hours after Tehran again rejected the idea. A10

Hidden cash A D.C. man is stashing money at local landmarks and filming the finders as part of Instagram-driven scavenger hunts. B1

THE NATION U.S. Catholic bishops ended their refugee resettlement work, citing federal funding cuts. A3
An admiral at NATO who praised diversity efforts is the latest senior officer to be fired. A7

THE WORLD A West Bank village buried a Palestinian American teenager shot by Israeli forces. A8
Israeli soldiers razed buildings in Gaza to create a buffer zone, a new report said. A10

THE ECONOMY In Arizona, retirees' opinions about President Donald Trump's tariffs appear to be split largely along partisan lines. A12
Cuts at HUD threaten the enforcement of laws prohibiting discrimination in housing, employees said. A15

THE REGION Baby boomers have overtaken millennials as the top home-buying generation, according to the National Association of Realtors. B1
D.C. was still in financial limbo as the House delayed a vote on a bill that would let the city's budget remain intact. B1

STYLE "The White Lotus" wrapped up its third season, and Shane O'Neill and Anne Branigin broke down the killer finale. C1
HEALTH & SCIENCE High tech is making inroads in the field of medicine, leading to new treatments for a variety of diseases. E1

BUSINESS NEWS.....A12
COMICS.....C5
OBITUARIES.....B4
OPINION PAGES.....A17
TELEVISION.....C4
WORLD NEWS.....A8

CONTENT © 2025
The Washington Post
Year 148, No. 54180

