

Chicago Tribune

QUESTIONS? CALL 1-800-TRIBUNE

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 15, 2025

BREAKING NEWS AT CHICAGOTRIBUNE.COM

Ill. Senate president faces nearly $10M fine

Harmon's appeal of recommendation coming next week

By Rick Pearson
Chicago Tribune

The Illinois State Board of Elections will decide next week whether it should follow a hearing officer's recommendation and reject state Senate President Don Harmon's appeal of a nearly $10 million fine for accepting campaign contributions in excess of state campaign finance limits.

The board at its Tuesday meeting will consider the recommendation of Northbrook attorney Barbara Goodman, who heard arguments from Harmon's attorney on Aug. 20 and found last week that Harmon's campaign committee "failed to establish by a preponderance of the evidence that the assessment was in error or that no actual violation of (the law) occurred."

At issue is an Illinois election law, which Harmon co-sponsored, aimed at curbing the influence of big money in political campaigns and one key provision that ostensibly was written to ensure lesser-funded candidates weren't hurt by the campaign contribution limits. The provision sought to offset challenges from deep-pocketed rivals who self-fund their campaigns or have help from wealthy independent expenditure groups by lifting contribution limits for all candidates in a contest.

But the lifting of limits after a candidate gave themselves more than $250,000 in a statewide race or $100,000 in other races quickly became a way for powerful incumbents, including Harmon, to take in unlimited donations to enhance their own electability and engender loyalty by being able to distribute money to the campaigns of allies.

The issue in Harmon's case centered on what constitutes "an election cycle" and was more complicated as Senate terms are split between two- and four-year terms, unlike those of the Illinois House, which are run every two

Turn to Harmon, Page 12

U.S. Border Patrol agents scuffle with community members in the 10500 block of South Avenue M on Tuesday. TERRENCE ANTONIO JAMES/TRIBUNE

Federal agents use tear gas to quell clash on East Side

Residents demand immigration enforcement officials leave neighborhood after crash

By Sam Charles and Caroline Kubzansky
Chicago Tribune

Federal agents deployed multiple canisters of tear gas in a residential block of the East Side neighborhood Tuesday to quell a clash with residents who demanded the enforcement officers leave the neighborhood.

At least 100 neighbors flocked late Tuesday morning to 105th Street and Avenue N following a vehicle crash involving at least one U.S. Customs and Border Protection vehicle. At least three people were detained in the chase and confrontation that followed.

The Department of Homeland Security alleged in a statement issued Tuesday that the chase, subsequent crash and confrontation began when "a vehicle, driven by an illegal alien, rammed a Border Patrol vehicle and attempted to flee the scene."

"Border Patrol pursued the vehicle and was eventually able to stop it utilizing an authorized precision immobilization technique (PIT) maneuver," the statement said. "Once the vehicle was stopped, the suspects, who are both illegal aliens, attempted to flee on foot. As Border Patrol arrested the subjects and attempted to secure the scene a crowd began to form and eventually turned hostile and eventually crowd control measures were used."

Security video from one area residence captured the SUV containing the agents striking another SUV and spinning it into a parked car, but not any initial ramming, which could have occurred out of the frame

Turn to Clash, Page 4

WHAT TO DO IF ICE STOPS YOU: Many people wonder what documents to carry to prove their identity. Page 6

IN FOREST PARK: Cemetery workers recount traumatic clash with ICE. Page 6

SENT HOME: Seven Texas Guard members replaced for not meeting fitness levels. Page 12

'EVERYONE IS WELCOME, EXCEPT ICE' Cafes, restaurants put up signs barring immigration agents. Food & Health

Electrical and math instructor Bruce Windorski, right, checks the work of student Rihauna Fuentez of Shawano after she wired a switch and outlet to a light bulb during an electricity class on Sept. 17 at the College of Menominee Nation in Keshena, Wis. DOMINIC DI PALERMO/CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Proposed federal cuts rattle tribal college

Trump homing in on the schools, many in rural areas of Midwest

By Kate Armanini
Chicago Tribune

KESHENA, Wis. — Rihauna Fuentez runs her fingers along the tangled wires, tracing their course over a wooden panel and into an electrical box. The 20-year-old, with mussed rainbow hair and a nose piercing, pounds her hammer with precision.

She surveys her work beside her peers. "I'm just trying to figure out which color wire I put through," Fuentez said, pointing to a metal switch plate.

The workshop sits on the wooded campus of the College of Menominee Nation, nearly 250 miles north of Chicago. Each corner is crowded with industrial equipment and half-finished electrical projects, with the lingering smell of sawdust. Most of the students are Native American.

Like many of her classmates, Fuentez grew up on the remote Menominee Reservation. "I hadn't really thought about going out of state and whatnot," she said. "I'm just testing college as a whole ... It's been going pretty good so far."

Yet the tiny college faces threats that extend far beyond the workshop, or rural stretches of northern Wisconsin.

Higher education has become

Turn to Tribal, Page 2

American port fees and tariffs stoke trade war

Charge targets ships built in China as tax hits wood products

By Peter Eavis
The New York Times

The Trump administration broadened its trade war with China on Tuesday, as it began imposing fees on Chinese ships docking at American ports.

The long-planned action is intended to counter China's dominance of commercial shipbuilding and help revitalize the United States' own shipbuilding industry, which has withered over the years.

China's Ministry of Transport threatened retaliation on Friday, saying it planned to hit American vessels with fees when they docked in China. The shipping clash comes as trade relations between China and the United States are again wobbling. Last week, after China announced more stringent restrictions on rare earth minerals, President Donald Trump threatened to impose more tariffs on the country, before tempering his tone somewhat.

The move Tuesday came as

Turn to Trade, Page 4

Dead captives' slow return tests truce

Israel said it would slash aid deliveries to Gaza over concerns the militant group was handing over remains slower than agreed. Nation & World

Practice squad kicker the hero

The Bears win their third straight — and second straight in walk-off fashion: Brad Biggs' 10 thoughts on Week 6. Chicago Sports

TODAY'S WEATHER High 61 Low 55

Complete Chicagoland forecast on Page 16

$4.00 city and suburbs and elsewhere
178th year No. 288 © Chicago Tribune

