

You REALLY can get sunburnt eyes if you don't wear shades

Are fat jabs making my hair fall out?

Britain is facing societal collapse, warns Farage

Lawlessness is taking hold 'very rapidly', Reform leader says

By Martin Beckford
Policy Editor

BRITAIN is on the brink of 'societal collapse', Nigel Farage warned as he vowed to halve crime in five years if he becomes prime minister.

Reform's leader claimed people were scared to go to the shops and tourists were staying away from London as a result of soaring muggings and brazen shoplifting.

He also claimed the country was close to 'civil disobedience on a vast scale' as a result of alleged crimes by migrants.

Mr Farage defended those protesting outside an Epping hotel housing asylum seekers as 'genuinely concerned families' and blamed 'some bad eggs' for the violent clashes with police.

Reform's plan to restore law and order, costing an estimated £17.4 billion over the course of the next parliament, would include recruiting 30,000 more police officers and creating 12,400 extra places in five 'Nightingale prisons' built

Been on the Mounjaro, Leonardo? Actor, 50 shapes up for holiday with model Vittoria, 27

SEE PAGE NINE

Turn to Page 6

New look: A slimmer Leonardo DiCaprio with Vittoria Ceretti at St Tropez