

Chicago Tribune

QUESTIONS? CALL 1-800-TRIBUNE

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 18, 2025

BREAKING NEWS AT CHICAGOTRIBUNE.COM

Officials: Threats to lawmakers on the rise

Senators briefed by security leaders after deaths in Minnesota

By Mary Clare Jalonick and Kevin Freking
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Threats to members of Congress are on the rise, security officials told senators on Tuesday at an emergency briefing in the wake of the killing of a Minnesota state lawmaker in her home over the weekend.

U.S. Capitol Police leaders and Senate security officials said threats against elected officials, including federal lawmakers, has “dramatically increased,” Senate Democratic Leader Chuck Schumer said after the briefing, adding, “and that means we need more protection.”

The suspect in the Minnesota attack had dozens of Democratic members of Congress listed in his writings, in addition to the state lawmakers and others he’s accused of targeting. The man is accused of shooting and killing former Democratic House Speaker Melissa Hortman and her husband, Mark, in their home early Saturday in the northern Minneapolis suburbs and wounding another lawmaker and his wife at their home.

The shooting renewed fears — and stoked existing partisan tensions — over the security of federal lawmakers when they are in Washington and especially when they are at home. Credible threats to members of Congress have more than doubled in the last decade.

Still, it is unclear what more can be done amid yearslong disagreements over how much money should be spent to protect lawmakers. GOP Texas Sen. John Cornyn said after the briefing that they were told that threats against

Turn to Threats, Page 6

INSIDE: Two female Illinois politicians say their names were listed in alleged Minnesota shooter’s notes. Page 6

Protesters hang a banner and blockade a vehicle entrance to immigration court at 55 E. Monroe St. in the Loop on Tuesday. BRIAN CASSELLA/TRIBUNE

City’s ICE field director defends agents’ conduct

Agency ramps up enforcement, detains US citizens during protest outside court

By Nell Salzman and Laura Rodríguez Presa
Chicago Tribune

The head of Chicago’s U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement field office Tuesday defended the conduct and decorum of federal agents who have ramped up arrests of undocumented immigrants, which has incited clashes with elected officials, immigration advocates and protesters.

On Monday, three U.S. citizens were detained by ICE after allegedly assaulting an officer in Chicago, according to a Department of Homeland Security spokesperson.

In an interview Tuesday with the Tribune, Samuel Olson, ICE’s Chicago field office director, explained that “the last thing (the agents) want to do is to have to arrest somebody who’s assaulting them or impeding them from doing their jobs.”

ICE released all three protesters Monday afternoon. Asked whether the protesters were charged, Olson said the arrests of the protesters are under investigation by the U.S. attorney’s office for the Northern District of Illinois.

“It’s a hard enough job that they have to worry about who

INSIDE: After reports that Chicago is “next” in Trump’s militarized crackdown, mayor warns president to respect the Constitution. Page 2

the target is that they’re arresting, whether that person might be assaultive or combative,” Olson said.

The arrests of U.S. citizens caught immigration advocates by surprise, as pushback against increased immigration enforcement has only grown across the country. On Tuesday, New York City Comptroller Brad Lander, a mayoral candidate, was arrested for allegedly “assaulting law enforcement and impeding a federal officer” at immigration court, according to DHS. The arrest was captured on video that quickly went viral on social media.

On Sunday, President Donald Trump sent out a directive to ramp up deportations further in Democrat-run cities. Immigration enforcement has increased at courts and offices in Chicago in recent weeks, with two immigrants from Colombia detained on Father’s Day for showing up to their check-in appointments.

Turn to ICE, Page 2

Carmen Lemons, left, and Lynn Walker of Lem’s Bar-B-Q stand for a portrait after winning the America’s Classics Award at the 2025 James Beard Awards on Monday in Chicago. ARMANDO L. SANCHEZ/TRIBUNE

Chicago’s culinary champions

Many James Beard award winners spoke of immigrant roots

By Kayla Samoy, Ahmed Ali Akbar and Zareen Syed
Chicago Tribune

The uncertainties of the country’s shifting immigration landscape hung heavy over the 2025 James Beard Restaurant and Chef Awards at the Lyric Opera in Chicago on Monday evening, where Japanese dining bar

Kumiko and chef Noah Sandoval of Oriole were announced as winners.

Julia Momosé, who accepted the Outstanding Bar award for Kumiko, spoke of her Japanese heritage, while a representative for Sandoval, who won in the Best Chef: Great Lakes category but was unable to attend, read his pre-prepared comments, which ended with “(expletive) ICE,” a phrase that multiple winners repeated throughout the evening.

As celebrity chefs and TV personalities presented the most prestigious awards in the U.S. restaurant industry, there were messages of hope. Many winners spoke of their immigrant roots and the power of embracing cultures of all kinds. Gov. JB Pritzker also offered remarks.

“Across this nation, we need to celebrate the rich tradition of diversity,” Pritzker said. “At this moment, especially in the world, it seems that we need that togetherness more than ever before.”

Momosé, creative director

Turn to Awards, Page 4

Suspect in chase that led to officer’s death still at large

Visitation for Rivera on June 24 with funeral scheduled for next day

By Sam Charles
Chicago Tribune

The calls over police dispatch came fast and furious, like they always do.

“Shots fired at the police!” one officer shouted.

But there was just a single shot fired, and it was a cop who pulled the trigger, resulting in the first time in nearly four decades that a Chicago police officer was mistakenly fatally shot by a fellow cop while on duty.

Now, the better part of two weeks after tactical Officer Krystal Rivera died in the friendly fire incident, investigators are still searching for the suspect who sparked a brief foot pursuit that ultimately led to the fatal gunfire in a Chatham apartment building.

Meanwhile, investigators with the Civilian Office of Police Accountability continue to probe the gunshot that resulted in Rivera’s on-duty death, CPD’s first of 2025. In the moments after the chase, Rivera was shot and killed by her own partner, authorities have said.

Funeral arrangements for Rivera have now been set.

Her visitation is planned for 2 to 8 p.m. June 24 at the Montclair-Lucania Funeral Home in the Montclare neighborhood on the Northwest Side, police said. The funeral service will be held at noon the next day, at Living Word Christian Center in Forest Park.

The shooting: Shortly before 10 p.m. June 5, Rivera and other members of a Gresham District (6th) tactical team tried to stop a weapons suspect in the 8200 block of South Drexel, officials previously said. That suspect ran into an apartment building, and officers gave chase into one of the units.

They were then confronted by two others, one of whom allegedly

Turn to Shooting, Page 4

Rivera

INSIDE

Trump tells Iran to give up ‘entirely’

Israel claimed to have killed another top Iranian general, and President Trump demanded Iran surrender. Nation & World in Chicagoland, Page 8

An NL Central smorgasbord

A rare scheduling quirk has the Cardinals and Brewers in town for the first time this season — but on opposite sides of town. Paul Sullivan in Chicago Sports

TODAY’S WEATHER

High 78

Low 64

Complete Chicagoland forecast on Page 20

$4.00 city and suburbs and elsewhere
178th year No. 169 © Chicago Tribune

