

The Boston Globe

Serving our community since 1872

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 18, 2025

Trump calls for Tehran to surrender

Smoke rose over the city after an Israeli air strike in Tehran on Tuesday.

ARASH KHAMOOSHI/NEW YORK TIMES

As Israel presses air attacks, president weighs use of bunker-busting bomb

By David E. Sanger
NEW YORK TIMES

WASHINGTON — President Trump declared on Tuesday that “we now have complete and total control of the skies over Iran” and called for Iran’s “unconditional surrender” amid mounting evidence that the United States was considering joining Israel’s bombing campaign against the country. Trump made his statements on his social media site before he met with his national security team for a little more than an hour Tuesday afternoon. But before they met, there were signs the Pentagon, anticipating that orders for a strike might be forthcoming, sent about three dozen refueling aircraft to Europe that could be used to assist fighter jets protecting US bases and personnel in the Middle East. The aircraft would also be capable of refueling B-2s flown out of the United States on their way to targets in Iran, presumably starting with Fordo, the under-the-mountain nuclear enrichment center that Iran built about 15 years ago to withstand the heaviest strikes. Trump’s increasingly martial tone — a sharp reversal from his announced confidence two weeks ago that a nuclear deal with Iran was easily within reach — came only hours after he cut short his attendance at the Group of 7 summit of industrialized nations in Alberta, Canada, saying he needed to return to Washington to deal with the situation in the Middle East. His immediate decision is whether to deploy America’s largest conventional weapon — the 30,000-pound Massive Ordnance Penetrator — to attack

MIDEAST, Page A5

N.H. abuse claim tests time limits

Suit says assault occurred at Catholic camp in 1970s

By Steven Porter
GLOBE STAFF

GILMANTON IRON WORKS, N.H. — A half-mile gravel road cuts through the woods that isolate Camp Fatima from the outside world, leading to an idyllic lakefront retreat where Catholic leaders have hosted sleep-away camps for boys each summer for generations.

While some campers have carried fond memories of friendships forged and outdoors explored while staying at the property on Upper Suncook Lake, others have carried emotional scars after clergymen who were supposed to serve as role models instead allegedly subjected them to sexual abuse.

A man who filed a lawsuit in 2023 against the Roman Catholic bishop of Manchester alleges he was about 8 years old when he was raped by the camp’s director in the mid-1970s. The diocese contends that the plaintiff waited too long to file his claim and, last fall, a judge agreed, dismissing the case. The plaintiff’s attorneys have appealed to the New Hampshire

CAMP, Page A10

Legal status change threatens migrants in caregiver roles

By Katie Johnston
GLOBE STAFF

In one room, a Haitian employee helped a woman put on leg braces and stand in front of her wheelchair for 45 seconds at a time as part of her physical therapy routine. “Good job, girl,” the staffer said when the final timer beeped.

On the other side of the building, another Haitian worker leaned over a woman lying on a mat: “You OK?” the employee asked protectively.

The workers are among roughly 31 Haitian staff members at the Marshfield-based developmental disabilities provider Road to Responsibility who have been stripped of their right to be in the United States following a recent Supreme Court decision that allowed the Trump administration to end a Biden-era immigration program.

But their employer hasn’t received any notification about how to proceed, leaving everyone with questions yet to be answered: Do they

HAITIANS, Page A6

Poet’s garden is a place of peace on island dedicated to science

Workers, volunteers follow a plan formed more than 130 years ago

By Amanda Gokee
GLOBE STAFF

APPLEDORE ISLAND, Maine — Surrounded by sea gulls, staghorn sumac, and the Atlantic Ocean, Terry Cook is going to great lengths to re-create a garden dreamed up by a 19th-century poet.

On a bright day in late spring, Cook, along with three volunteers and dozens of seedlings, boarded a boat for the 35-minute ride over the open ocean from New Castle, N.H., to Appledore Island, Maine.

Cook and his volunteers hauled poppies, hollyhocks, and dahlias onto the dock, where scientists, researchers, and students formed a human chain, handing the potted plants up to solid ground and loading them into the flat back of a small utility vehicle.

Their goal was to follow both the plant varieties and placement laid out in a 1893 garden plan.

Cook is the master gardener for the Shoals Marine Laboratory, where scientists and students conduct research and attend classes on a remote island dedicated to marine science. Each summer, Cook oversees the decades-long tradition of restoring this historic garden.

GARDEN, Page A10

PHOTOS BY LANE TURNER/GLOBE STAFF

Top: Terry Cook (center) carried plants into the Thaxter garden on Appledore Island. Above, a photo of Celia Thaxter, who planted the original garden in the 1800s.

DEVERS IN SAN FRANCISCO

The former Red Sox star said he would do whatever the Giants asked, including playing first base. “They’re the men in charge. I am here to play wherever they want to me play,” he said. Sports, C1.

JEFF CHIU/ASSOCIATED PRESS

Russia pummeled Kyiv with drones and missiles, killing at least 10 people, including an American. A4.

Boston Public Schools leaders are exploring changes to the admissions policies for the district’s three exam schools. B1.

Home sales in Greater Boston have increased and inventory is up, but prices continue to climb. B5.

Couple of close calls

Wednesday: Cloudy, humid. High: 74-79. Low: 65-70.

Thursday: Humid, warmer, storm possible. High: 87-92. Low: 67-72.

Sunrise: 5:07 Sunset: 8:24

Comics and Weather, G6-7. Obituaries, C9.

New schools chief has battled officials

Martinez sued to keep Chicago job, fought Texas AG over vaccines

By John Hilliard
GLOBE STAFF

Pedro Martinez, tapped this spring to become state’s next education commissioner, has encountered his fair share of controversy as a schools leader who has battled elected leaders in Nevada, Texas, and Illinois.

And as he takes charge in Massachusetts July 1, Martinez said he won’t back down if he thinks he’s acting in the best interests of students.

“I’m always going to stand up for what’s right for kids. And that will mean even putting my role at risk,” Martinez said in an interview.

For Martinez, who departs as the leader of Chicago’s public schools June 18, that included a clash with the Texas attorney general who attacked his vaccine mandate for staff in 2021 amid the height of the pandemic while Martinez led San Antonio schools.

In Chicago, his relationships with the mayor, the teachers union, and members of the school board soured during contentious union contract talks and the schools budgeting process.

There he successfully sued the school board in December after members fired him without cause, making way to stay in the job. And last week, he amended the lawsuit to include defamation claims against the board president, the Chicago Teachers Union, and its president.

“I’m never going to pick fights,” Martinez said in an interview. “I’m never going to be the one that, you know, tries to do things [on my own]. It’s always going to be with a coalition.”

Not all the confrontations involved students. In Nevada

MARTINEZ, Page A7

VOL. 307, NO. 169

*

Suggested retail price
$4.00

0 947725 4