

ALAS

Vine & Hitchens

Sarah's Ozempic and anti-depressant habit. Why Peter thinks cars should be banned. Our combative columnists go toe-to-toe in new podcast episode

APPLE OR SPOTIFY

Ethnic minority and transgender criminals should get special treatment under rules Tories say could mean softer sentences

NEW TWO-TIER JUSTICE FIASCO

By David Barrett
Home Affairs Editor

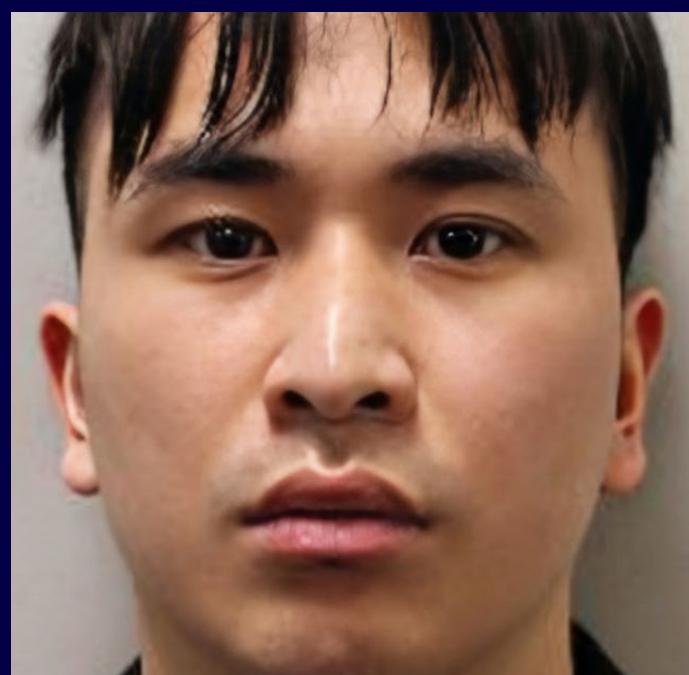

LABOUR faced fresh accusations of a 'two-tier justice system' last night amid astonishing moves to give minorities special treatment in court.

All ethnic minorities and transgender people convicted of a crime should be treated differently, according to measures due to come into force next month.

The Conservatives said they could open the door to softer sentences for minorities, and risked making the courts 'anti-white and anti-Christian'. And it reignited the row that erupted after last summer's riots, when critics said distinct groups were treated differently by the justice system.

The new rules, distributed to magistrates and judges by the Sentencing Council yesterday, say it must 'normally be considered necessary' for the courts to commission a 'pre-sentence report' about criminals if they come from 'an ethnic minority, cultural

Turn to Page 2

Predator: Rapist Zhenhao Zou may have 60 victims

Son of Chinese Communist Party official is one of UK's most prolific rapists

SEE PAGES 4-5