

DEMONSTRATORS in Milan hold up anti-ICE signs ahead of the Winter Olympics, which begin this week. RYO AOKI Associated Press

HOUSE, TRUMP APPROVE BILL FOR FUNDING

Partial shutdown ends, but the stage is set for the next battle over Homeland Security.

By Kevin Freking

WASHINGTON — President Trump signed a roughly $1.2-trillion government funding bill Tuesday that ends the partial federal shutdown that began over the weekend and sets the stage for an intense debate in Congress over Homeland Security funding.

The president moved quickly to sign the bill after the House approved it with a 217-214 vote.

“This bill is a great victory for the American people,” Trump said.

The vote Tuesday wrapped up congressional work on 11 annual appropriations bills that fund government agencies and programs through Sept. 30.

Passage of the legislation marked the end point for one funding fight, but the start of another. That’s because the package funds the Department of Homeland Security only through Feb. 13, at the behest of Democrats who are demanding more restrictions on immigration enforcement after the shooting deaths of Alex Pretti and Renee Good by federal officers in Minneapolis.

Difficult negotiations are ahead, particularly for the agency that enforces the nation’s immigration laws — U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement, or ICE.

House Democratic leader Hakeem Jeffries quickly warned that Democrats would not support any further temporary funding for Homeland Security without substantial changes to its immigration operations, raising the potential of another shutdown for the department and its agencies.

“We need dramatic change in order to make sure that ICE and other agencies within the Department of Homeland Security are conducting themselves like every other law enforcement organization in the country,” Jeffries said.

Speaker Mike Johnson said he expects the two sides will be able to reach an agreement by the deadline.

“This is no time to play games with that funding. We hope that they will operate in good faith over the next 10 days as we negotiate this,” Johnson said. “The president, again, has reached out.”

But Johnson’s counterpart across the Capitol, Sen. [See Shutdown, A7]

Protesters blast ICE’s security role at Games

Italians criticize the agents and Trump, raising concerns about how U.S. athletes will be treated

By Kevin Baxter

MILAN — Many of the officials supporting the nearly 250 U.S. athletes competing in this month’s Winter Olympics arrived in Italy last weekend to a greeting they may not have expected: Hundreds of demonstrators packed a square in central Milan to protest the reported plan to deploy U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement agents during the Games.

The first events in the 18-day competition, which will be shared by Milan and Cortina d’Ampezzo in the Italian Alps, begin Thursday, and the opening ceremony is scheduled for Friday. Against that background, International Olympic Committee President Kirsty Coventry called the agents’ involvement “distracting” and “sad.”

“This is a militia that kills. They are not welcome in Milan,” Mayor Giuseppe Sala said on local radio ahead of the protests, which took place beneath the neoclassical Porta Garibaldi arch in the Piazza XXV Aprile, named for the date of Italy’s liberation from Nazi fascism in World War II.

Many demonstrators blew whistles and carried signs of the five Olympic rings rendered as handcuffs above the words “No ICE in Milan.” One woman held a handmade poster featuring photos of Renee Good and Alex Pretti, the two Minnesotans killed by federal agents last month, alongside Liam Conejo Ramos, the 5-year-old boy in the blue bunny hat who was taken [See Olympics, A8]

Family says death changed nothing

Renee Good’s brothers join call for curbs on ICE agent force

By Andrea Castillo

WASHINGTON — One of the brothers of Renee Good, the 37-year-old mother of three who was shot and killed by an immigration agent in Minneapolis, told congressional Democrats on Tuesday that he needed their help.

Luke Ganger said their family had taken some consolation in the thought that his sister’s death might spark a change.

“It has not,” he said.

That is why Ganger and people who had been violently detained by immigration agents gathered to share their experiences with U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement and to ask the government to rein in an agency they described as lawless.

Tuesday’s forum — not an official hearing because

ROBERTO SCHMIDT AFP/Getty Images

GOOD’S brothers, Brent, left, and Luke Ganger, joined victims at a forum on violent ICE encounters.

U.S. taps a seasoned envoy for Venezuela

Laura Farnsworth Dogu, whose career is forged in crisis, will rebuild bilateral ties.

By Yamlek Mojica Loaisiga

Laura Farnsworth Dogu is not, at first glance, your typical Trump appointee.

A career diplomat with postings under the Obama and Biden administrations, she represents a branch of government President Trump has cut back and long vilified.

Yet her selection for Trump’s top envoy to Venezuela signals a rare strategic choice, leveraging her experience with authoritarian regimes at a moment when

Washington is recalibrating its approach to Caracas after the overthrow of Nicolás Maduro.

“There are not very many cases in this administration where they have relied on a career diplomat,” says Elliott Abrams, who served as Trump’s special representative for Venezuela in 2019. “This is actually an anomaly.”

Abrams suggests the appointment of Dogu — who met with the interim president, Delcy Rodríguez, in Caracas on Monday — could reflect a desire for a seasoned expert to manage day-to-day diplomacy as the administration embarks on one of its most complex foreign policy undertakings.

“What he really needs is a professional to oversee the [See Venezuela, A4]

Disney names longtime insider to be next CEO

Theme parks chief will succeed Bob Iger, who will stay on the board until December.

By Meg James and Samantha Masunaga

Walt Disney Co. selected theme parks chief Josh D’Amaro to be the company’s next chief executive, culminating the most closely watched succession drama in Hollywood.

D’Amaro, who has run the company’s pivotal parks and experiences division for six years, will be charged with steering the Burbank entertainment giant through increasingly turbulent times.

He officially becomes chief executive at the company’s March 18 shareholder meeting — replacing Chief Executive Bob Iger, who will hand over the reins after two decades in the top job revitalizing the company.

Iger will stay on as a senior advisor and board member until his retirement from the company when his contract expires in December.

Dana Walden, co-chair of Disney Entertainment, was named the company’s president and chief creative officer, becoming the first woman to serve as president at the 102-year-old company. She will report to D’Amaro.

“Josh D’Amaro is an exceptional leader and the right person to become our next CEO,” Iger said in a statement. “He has an instinctive appreciation of the Disney brand, and a deep understanding of what resonates with our audiences, paired with the rigor and attention to detail required to deliver some of our most ambitious projects.”

ADAM KISSICK SXSW Conference

JOSH D’AMARO, the incoming CEO, is a favorite on Wall Street and among Disney superfans.

D’Amaro, who turns 55 this month, is respected on Wall Street and has long been a favorite among legions of Disney superfans who view him as a charismatic cheerleader for Mickey Mouse, Buzz Lightyear and other inhabitants of the Magic Kingdom.

Within Disney, D’Amaro is known for his consensus-building style, his mastery of Disney’s distinct culture and for safeguarding its beloved brands.

D’Amaro, a native of Massachusetts, joined Disney 28 years ago in Anaheim’s Disneyland accounting department and will become the ninth person to lead the company. He steadily rose through the ranks, working in finance, business strategy and marketing and eventually leading Disneyland and then the larger Disney World Resort in Florida.

A big promotion came in early 2020 when he was entrusted with all of the company’s theme parks, cruise lines and its creative cadre of Imagineers.

[See Disney, A12]

Savannah Guthrie’s mother ‘taken’

Blood is found at her Arizona home, along with signs of forced entry, sources say.

By Richard Winton, Grace Toohey and Clara Harter

When authorities were initially called to Nancy Guthrie’s desert home a few miles north of Tucson on Sunday, they immediately found what officials described as suspicious and concerning circumstances.

There was no sign of the mom of “Today” show host Savannah Guthrie, but essentials she would travel with remained: her cell phone, wallet, car and medication. While the 84-year-old was of sound mind, she had physical ailments that kept her from walking very far — suggesting she didn’t leave on her own.

According to law enforcement sources not authorized to speak about the case publicly, someone appeared to have forced their way inside, and there was blood at the scene. Images reviewed by The Times showed blood spatters near the front door of the home. A security camera frame at Guthrie’s front door was empty, though it was unclear how long it had been that way.

Three days into the search for her and her possible abductors, the mystery has only deepened.

Authorities on Tuesday said they couldn’t rule out that she was kidnapped for ransom, about an hour before TMZ reported that it had received an alleged ran-

[See Guthrie, A10]

Ski mountaineering makes its ascent

Newest Winter Olympics sport combines mountain climbing, skiing and a lot of fortitude. SPORTS, B10

UCLA doctor’s conviction tossed

An appeals court orders a retrial for gynecologist because lawyers weren’t told of jury’s concerns. CALIFORNIA, B1

Upcoming books with real appeal

Our panel picks titles by T.C. Boyle, Jesmyn Ward, Jordan Harper and Rebecca Solnit. ENTERTAINMENT, E1

Weather

Very warm. L.A. Basin: 90/60. B5

For the latest news, go to latimes.com.

7 85944 00200 5

MYUNG J. CHUN L.A. Times

THE RELIEF could cost the city $90 million.

Waiving rebuild fees in fire zone

L.A. City Council OKs financial relief for Palisades residents months after mayor announced it. CALIFORNIA, B1

Markets A13
Opinion Voices A14