

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL.

DOW JONES | News Corp

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 10, 2025 ~ VOL. CCLXXXVI NO. 112

WSJ.com

★★★★ $5.00

Last week: DJIA 46987.10 ▼ 575.77 1.21% NASDAQ 23004.54 ▼ 3.0% STOXX 600 564.79 ▼ 1.2% 10-YR. TREASURY ▲ 2/32, yield 4.092% OIL $59.75 ▼ $1.23 EURO $1.1567 YEN 153.42

What's News

Business & Finance

- ◆ Investors have largely shrugged off a strong earnings season after Oct. 14 when big banks reported results, lifting the S&P 500 by only 1.3% since that date. A1
- ◆ Selling of shares in cryptocurrency companies is hitting big-name investors and individuals who followed evangelists into those investments. B1
- ◆ Visa and Mastercard are nearing a settlement with merchants that aims to end a 20-year-old legal dispute by lowering fees stores pay and giving them more power to reject certain credit cards. B1
- ◆ Hollywood producer Robert Simonds led a group of investors to acquire a controlling stake in NSO, the company behind Pegasus spyware. B1
- ◆ BBC's director general and its head of news resigned after criticism over the editing of remarks by Trump that were included in a documentary. B2
- ◆ Deflationary pressures in China eased further in October, in part thanks to stimulation from a weeklong holiday and Beijing's efforts to curb excess capacity in some sectors. A6
- ◆ "Predator: Badlands" led the domestic weekend movie box office with $40 million in ticket receipts at its debut. B2
- ◆ Chrome Hearts set a Southern California record when it paid $375 million to acquire the Surfrider Hotel in Malibu. B3
- ◆ Blake Lively is seeking more than $161 million in damages from an alleged smear campaign involving "It Ends With Us" co-star Justin Baldoni. B3

World-Wide

- ◆ The Senate cleared a critical procedural hurdle in its drive to end the record government shutdown, after Democrats provided enough votes to advance a measure designed to resolve the more than monthlong impasse. A1
- ◆ Trump suggested that tariff revenue could be used to fund payments of at least $2,000 to most Americans after the Supreme Court appeared skeptical of the legality of many of his tariffs. A4
- ◆ A district court judge blocked the Trump administration's effort to deploy National Guard troops to Portland, Ore. A2
- ◆ China put its largest and most sophisticated aircraft carrier into active service, advancing its ability to challenge U.S. power in the Asia-Pacific region and beyond. A6
- ◆ The FAA ordered all MD-11 planes temporarily grounded after the crash last week of a UPS cargo jet in Louisville, Ky., killed at least 14 people. A3
- ◆ Hamas returned the body of an Israeli army officer held by the militant group for more than a decade. A7
- ◆ Ukrainian strikes disrupted power and heating to two major Russian cities near the Ukrainian border. A7
- ◆ Supertyphoon Fung-wong came ashore on the Philippines, leaving at least two people dead and forcing the evacuation of more than one million. A7
- ◆ Died: Paul Tagliabue, 84, former NFL commissioner. A14... Lenny Wilkens, 88, NBA Hall of Famer. A2

JOURNAL REPORT
Investing Monthly: How to know if you need a financial adviser. B5-6

CONTENTS	Markets.....	B9
Arts in Review.....	Opinion.....	A15-17
Business & Finance.....	Personal Journal A11-12
Business News.....	Sports.....	A14
Crossword.....	Technology.....	B4
Heard on Street.....	U.S. News.....	A2-5
Market Data.....	World News.....	A6-8

© 2025 Dow Jones & Company, Inc.
All Rights Reserved

Deal on Shutdown Clears Hurdle

ARON SCHWARTZ/REUTERS

Senate Majority Leader John Thune (R., S.D.) after the chamber voted 60-40 Sunday to take up legislation ending the shutdown.

Democratic group joins Senate GOP to clinch funding, looks to vote on healthcare

WASHINGTON—The Senate late Sunday cleared a critical procedural hurdle in its drive to end the record-long government shutdown, after Democrats provided enough votes to advance a measure designed to end the more than monthlong impasse.

By Siobhan Hughes,
Olivia Beavers and
Anna Wilde Mathews

The vote was 60-40 on a measure to take up spending legislation that required 60 votes under the Senate's filibuster procedures. Eight members of the Democratic caucus joined almost all Republicans in voting in favor, allowing the bill to move forward after more than a dozen failed votes since September.

The Senate's next big step is to amend the measure and
Please turn to page A4

◆ Election whipsaw signals impatience for change....A5

Markets Hold Back Rewards for Solid Earnings

By HANNAH ERIN LANG

American companies are turning in one of their best quarters in years. Wall Street has just shrugged.

Of the 446 companies in the S&P 500 to report third-quarter results so far, more than 80% of them beat analysts' estimates, according to LSEG I/B/E/S data. That is the biggest crop of outperformers since the spring of 2021. But no matter how many times those analysts might have uttered the words, "great quarter, guys," in recent weeks, the message hasn't reached stock investors.

The S&P 500 is only up 1.3% since Oct. 14, when JPMorgan Chase and other big banks kicked off the season with strong results. Furthermore, the median stock among S&P 500 companies that beat its earnings estimates bested the broader benchmark by only 0.3% in the day after it reported, according to an Oct. 31 report from Goldman Sachs analysts. The historical average, Goldman said: about 1%.

Why good earnings aren't moving the needle for investors as much as they often do has a lot to do with the market's monthslong climb to records. As stocks reached new heights, the expectations for corporate results also moved higher.

"The market has been filled with steamroller momentum for the last four months, so it doesn't shock me that even surprisingly good earnings are being met with a bit of exhaustion," said Chris Grisanti, chief market strategist at MAI Capital Management.

Investors, though, aren't just tired from all of that winning.

Last week, concerns that tech companies were overspending on AI initiatives pulled the Nasdaq Composite Index into its biggest weekly decline since April. Surveys on consumer sentiment and job cuts gave investors new reasons to fret about the health of the overall U.S. economy. The broader S&P 500 ended the week down 1.6%.

Even before the early November selloff, some investors were skeptical of the valuations touched by the market's largest and hottest stocks. Giant tech companies, many of which have been the biggest beneficiaries of the enthusiasm over artificial intelligence, are now trading at dozens and sometimes hundreds of times their projected earnings.

One valuation metric popu-
Please turn to page A2

Tech Titans Try to Make Genetically Engineered Babies

Silicon Valley billionaires push boundaries of reproductive genetics

For months, a small company in San Francisco has been pursuing a secretive

By Emily Glazer,
Katherine Long and
Amy Dockser Marcus

project: the birth of a genetically engineered baby.

Backed by OpenAI chief executive Sam Altman and his husband, along with Coinbase co-founder and CEO Brian Armstrong, the startup—called Preventive—has been preparing what would amount to a biological first. They are working toward creating a child born from an embryo edited to prevent a hereditary disease. In recent months, executives at the company pri-

Please turn to page A10

INSIDE

PERSONAL JOURNAL
Patients are getting more medicines—not just statins—to tackle high cholesterol. A12

U.S. NEWS

Two pitchers for the Cleveland Guardians are indicted in a gambling probe. A3

Hunt for Antimony Adds New Element To Trade Skirmish

By JON EMONT

ESTER, Alaska—At a mining site here, Rod Blakestad cracked open a shiny rock with his pick. He found quartz, a sign the rock may contain gold.

But Blakestad, a veteran gold hunter, tossed the rock aside. He and his team of geologists were searching for something even more sought-after: antimony, an obscure element widely used in the defense industry that is now at the center of the bitter U.S.-China trade fight.

"If we were looking for gold, we'd be high-fiving," he said.

Until recently, gold miners treated antimony, which is often found in mines, as detritus.

But that began changing last year, when China put in place heavy restrictions on antimony exports, including banning all shipments to the U.S. in December, in retaliation for restrictions Washington put on the export of American technology products to China.

That is squeezing defense companies, which use antimony to harden bullets and
Please turn to page A4

A Lucky Few Take Turns In Fast Lane

* * *

Pricey club offers free rein on high-speed track

By SAM SCHUBE

When I need to blow off steam, I like to go for a bike ride. If I'm really hammering it, I'll top 30 miles an hour going downhill.

When Alex Kryz wants to relax, he heads to Precision Drive Club in Miami where he can take a $300,000 McLaren for a spin around a Formula One-grade track. Experienced drivers can hit 170 mph on the back straightaway.

"It does truly clear my head," said the 57-year-old head of a private-equity firm. "You have to be thinking about how you're hitting your apex turns, where you are
Please turn to page A12

Listeners Are Flocking To Christian Music Now

By ELIAS LEIGHT

A few days after the star singer Forrest Frank fell off his skateboard, crashed into a wall and fractured two vertebrae, he previewed a new track about the accident on TikTok. Frank, formerly a member of the pop duo Surfaces, has exploded in the past year by making Christian music that pairs hip-hop inflected beats with relentlessly sunny lyrics. Though he was in "excruciating" pain, his tune aimed for uplift. "God's got my back," he sang, still bedridden. "Even when I fall or get attacked."

The TikTok clip has earned nearly four million views. After Frank officially released the track, titled "God's Got My Back," it racked up more than 15 million streams on Spotify and an additional five million on YouTube.

As Christian artists embrace a wider variety of sounds and market songs savvily on social media, they are rapidly widening their reach. Faith-based music can go viral just like rap or pop songs, and it gains an additional boost from its close relationship with country, which currently dominates the charts.

"I've been in it since 1997, and in all my years, I can't remember a time like this," said Holly Zabka, president of Provident Entertainment, a faith-based music label owned by Sony Music.

Frank is the bright-eyed, mustachioed face of Christian music's new wave: He has earned more than 1.2 billion on-demand streams in the U.S. in 2025, according to the data company Luminate.

"I think God just has his hand on him and is using him to speak to a generation through music," said Caleb Grimm, a Christian singer who makes popular mashup videos
Please turn to page A10

ORACLE
Fusion Applications

Oracle AI Agent Studio powers enterprise AI across Fusion Cloud Applications

Request a demo
Oracle.com/AI-Agents

