

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL.

DOW JONES | News Corp  WEDNESDAY, MAY 28, 2025 ~ VOL. CCLXXXV NO. 123 WSJ.com ★★★★★ $5.00

DJIA 42343.65 ▲ 740.58 1.78% NASDAQ 19199.16 ▲ 2.5% STOXX 600 552.32 ▲ 0.3% 10-YR. TREAS. ▲ 19/32, yield 4.432% OIL $60.89 ▼ $0.64 GOLD $3,299.10 ▼ $64.50 EURO $1.1329 YEN 144.36

What's News

Business & Finance

◆ News of easing trade tensions between the U.S. and the EU powered a 2% increase in the S&P 500, while the Nasdaq and Dow rose 2.5% and 1.8%, respectively. The yield on the 10-year Treasury note fell to 4.432%. A1

◆ Consumer sentiment jumped this month, partially reversing months of survey data that showed increasing pessimism as fears of high tariffs set in. A2

◆ House Republicans' plan to raise taxes on university endowments that is part of a broader bill could drive the biggest shift to endowments' investment strategies in a generation. A1

◆ The tax-and-spending bill dealt a setback to state and local efforts to ban an algorithmic pricing system for rental-apartment landlords. B1

◆ SpaceX's latest flight test fell short of carrying out planned experiments when the Starship spacecraft tumbled out of control and broke apart after its launch. B1

◆ The Trump administration was set to grant Chevron a narrow license to preserve its oil-producing assets in Venezuela after the company's Biden-era waiver to pump oil there expired. B1

◆ Salesforce struck a roughly $8 billion deal for data-management software firm Informatica in a bid to improve its capabilities in the race to put artificial intelligence to work. B1

◆ Southwest began charging customers $35 for one checked bag and $45 for a second unless they hold the airline's credit card or have elite status. B3

World-Wide

◆ Trump expressed renewed frustrations with Vladimir Putin, saying the Russian leader was "playing with fire" as peace talks with Ukraine have sputtered. A7

◆ Trump's media company plans to raise about $2.5 billion from institutional investors to buy bitcoin, the latest entanglement of his private business ventures and the crypto markets. A4

◆ The Trump administration is seeking to end the remaining federal contracts with Harvard University, according to a letter sent to federal agencies. A2

◆ National Public Radio filed a lawsuit challenging Trump's order to end federal funding of public media, saying the effort violates the First Amendment and federal law. A3

◆ A judge struck down Trump's executive order against law firm WilmerHale, adding to a tally of decisions that have rebuffed the White House campaign against the legal industry as unconstitutional. A3

◆ Two crypto investors face kidnapping charges for allegedly holding a wealthy trader captive in a Manhattan townhouse for three weeks for his bitcoin, law-enforcement officials said. A2

◆ Congestion pricing remains in effect in New York City after a judge temporarily barred the Trump administration from cutting transportation funds for New York. A2

◆ King Charles III defended Canada's sovereignty in a rare speech in Parliament, saying Ottawa was determined to protect the country's self-determination and freedom. A7

CONTENTS		Opinion.....	A15-17
Arts in Review.....	A13	Personal Journal A11-12
Business News.....	B3	Property Report.....	B6
Crossword.....	A14	Sports.....	A14
Heard on Street.....	B11	Technology.....	B4
Markets.....	B10	U.S. News.....	A2-5
Markets Digest.....	B7	World News.....	A7,18

© 2025 Dow Jones & Company, Inc. All Rights Reserved

Gaza Aid Delivery Gives Way to Chaos and Looting

ABDEL KAREEM HANAN/ASSOCIATED PRESS

DESPERATE SCRAMBLE: The distribution of aid for Gazans under an Israeli-backed plan went smoothly Tuesday until a gate collapsed at a center in Rafah, and thousands of Palestinians poured in to grab what supplies they could. A18

Goldman CEO Campaigned To Silence His Internal Critics

Criticism of David Solomon led firm to launch probe to identify leakers

By ANNA MARIA ANDRIOTIS

David Solomon was fed up with his critics inside Goldman Sachs. The time had come to crack down.

It was bad enough that Goldman partners were criticizing the chief executive's leadership and bad-mouthing the storied bank's costly expansion of consumer lending. What rankled Solomon even more was the suspicion that some of the naysayers were leaking details to reporters. Goldman launched a probe to figure out who was talking, according to people familiar with the probe.

Solomon was going through a brutal stretch in 2022 and 2023. The consumer lending expansion that he had spearheaded was generating billions of dollars in losses. It was hurting Goldman's stock, moneymaking partners were leaving and Solomon had taken flak for his attention-grabbing side gig DJing.

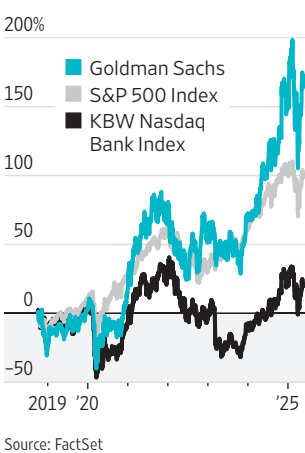

Solomon told Goldman's board that he was going to take action, pushing out troublemakers who he said were undermining him with their leaks, people familiar with the matter said. The board told Solomon he had their support. By last year, longtime executives who had openly criticized his strategy were gone. The departures sent a message inside Goldman: No one is safe if they go up against the CEO.

These days, things are going a whole lot smoother for Solomon. The bank is exiting consumer lending and refocusing on its core businesses of advising giant companies

Please turn to page A10

Goldman stock performance under CEO Solomon

Source: FactSet

Startup Shared Self-Drive Secrets With China

By HEATHER SOMERVILLE

A week after one of America's largest self-driving truck companies promised the U.S. government it would stop sharing sensitive technology with Chinese partners, TuSimple transferred a trove of data to a Beijing-owned firm.

"They want a lot of details," Xiaoling Han, a U.S.-based TuSimple Holdings employee, said to a colleague. A leading Chinese commercial-truck manufacturer, Foton, sought the data from TuSimple's many test drives around Texas. "It is pretty time consuming," Han wrote in a February 2022 chat exchange seen by The Wall Street Journal.

TuSimple was a leader in the global race to develop self-driving trucks that could solve chronic driver shortages, make freight hauling cheaper and bolster military operations. Founded by two Chinese entrepreneurs with money from a Chinese business mogul, the San Diego-based company set a record when its truck traveled 80 miles in Arizona without a human driver.

It shared that feat and others achieved on U.S. highways with its partners in China, according to hundreds of pages of previously unreported company correspondence viewed by The Journal.

Within a year and a half, TuSimple voluntarily shut down its U.S. operations, auctioned off its trucks and delisted from the Nasdaq. Its

Please turn to page A5

PERSONAL JOURNAL
New dating apps and events help young conservatives embrace the moment. A11

JASON GAY
The Ivy League school that just toppled a lacrosse powerhouse. A14

Trump's 'Golden Dome' Riles Nuclear-Armed Foes

President Trump's "Golden Dome" plan has riled the three countries whose weapons technology poses the greatest

By Austin Ramzy, Thomas Grove and Timothy W. Martin

threat to U.S. territory, with China, Russia and North Korea claiming the missile-defense project is driving a dangerous new arms race.

Trump wants a Golden Dome shield in place by the end of his term, which would combine ground-based interceptors with satellites to guard U.S. territory against high-tech threats, including hypersonic missiles.

The Chinese, North Koreans

Please turn to page A7

◆ U.S. reinforces Europe's northern front..... A7

When a Bar Fight Breaks Out, A Child's Game Is Often to Blame
* * *
Uno's surging popularity among adults turns up the tension; 'game night aggression'

By CONNOR HART

When a fight breaks out between a couple at one of his New York board game cafes, Greg May can guess the likely culprit without even looking up: Uno.

More than 50 years after its debut, the card-shedding game is now more popular than ever, fueled by savvy marketing, nostalgia and viral stunts.

That is especially true among young adults, who organize game nights around Uno, incorporate drinking rules and embrace increasingly cutthroat variations. But taking a game that already

Please turn to page A10

Stocks Rebound As Trade Tensions Abate

Dow gains more than 700 points after U.S., EU make progress on talks

By HANNAH ERIN LANG

Easing trade tensions between the U.S. and the European Union powered a 2% increase in the S&P 500 on Tuesday, a sign that some investors are betting the worst of President Trump's tariff war is in the rearview mirror.

Tuesday's rally was the largest single-day gain since May 12, when a rollback of tariffs between the U.S. and China spurred an even larger market rise.

While corporate earnings and bond-market jitters have prompted stock swings in recent weeks, trade policy remains the key driver of day-to-day market action. Investors have eagerly greeted any signs of easing tensions by driving markets higher, hopeful that the U.S. will eventually be able to strike deals with little lasting damage to the economy or corporate profits.

Few think the trade tensions have dissipated or won't spark near-term stock declines going forward. But many said the worst fears of U.S. restrictions permanently reordering global trade have moderated, and the economic blow is unlikely to be as damaging as it appeared when Trump announced sweeping tariffs on April 2.

Please turn to page A2

◆ Tariff relief lifts U.S. consumers..... A2
◆ Heard on the Street: Global markets' Japan risk..... B11

GOP Tax Bill Targets College Endowments

By JULIET CHUNG

House Republicans' plan to raise taxes on university endowments could drive the biggest shift to endowments' investment strategies in a generation.

The GOP plan is part of the broader bill that passed the House last week and now moves to the Senate. It would lift the tax on investment income for some of the biggest endowments from 1.4% to 21%, in line with what U.S. corporations pay. Other schools would see their taxes jump by significant amounts as well.

Under the new tax plan, universities might pull back from strategies that regularly generate short-term gains and shift money into other investments such as private equity, which generally don't realize gains for years.

The Wall Street Journal spoke to officials at eight private universities and colleges about their thinking on investment strategies in light of the bill. They largely said they

Please turn to page A4

◆ Trump seeks to end Harvard contracts..... A2

Agentforce
can help millions of diners find the best seat in the house.
Every minute.

Agentforce What AI Was Meant to Be