Battery safety myth a risk to aviation

IATA poll reveals confusion among air travellers

MANILA

BY JAY HILOTIN

Senior Assistant Editor

A survey has startlingly revealed widespread confusion among air travellers about lithium battery safety, posing serious risks to aviation.

In the poll conducted by the International Air Transport Association (IATA), half of passengers wrongly believe small lithium-powered devices can be stowed in checked baggage, while 45 per cent think power banks belong in the hold. A

7 RULES FOR CARRYING BATTERIES

- Pack light: Only bring the devices and batteries you really need.
- Stay alert: If a device is hot, smoking, or damaged, tell the crew.
- Check battery size: For larger batteries, check with your airline.
- Keep devices with you: Always carry phones, laptops, cameras, vapes and other battery-powered items in your hand baggage.
- Gate check reminder: If your hand baggage is taken at the gate to go in the hold, remove all lithium batteries and devices first.
- Protect loose batteries: Keep spare batteries and power banks in their original packaging or cover the terminals with tape.
- Check with your airline: Always confirm your airline's policies.

third (33 per cent) are uncertain about limits on larger batteries or spare power banks.

With travellers carrying more battery-powered devices than ever — 83 per cent pack phones, 60 per cent laptops, and 44 per cent power banks — IATA is reiterating the need to abide by the rules.

US sanctions on Russian oil firms hit India

BRENT CRUDE UP 5% AMID CONCERNS OVER REDUCED RUSSIAN FLOWS

DUBAI

BY JUSTIN VARGHESE

Your Money Editor

Russia's two largest oil producers, Rosneft PJSC and Lukoil PJSC, now face sweeping US sanctions that place roughly 3.1 million barrels per day (bpd) of exports at risk — nearly half of Russia's total oil shipments.

For Indian refiners, the sanctions mark a significant supply shock. India imported about 1.7 million bpd of Russian crude in the first nine months of 2025. Major purchasers like Reliance Industries Ltd have long-term supply agreements with Rosneft and are now weighing the impact.

The sanctions include asset freezes and transaction bans targeted at Rosneft and Lukoil, with a compliance wind-down period set for November 21, 2025. Institutions transacting with these firms face potential secondary sanctions. Brent crude jumped about 5 per cent amid concerns of reduced Russian flows.

High dependence

India's oil import dependence remains high: it consumed close to 4.84 million bpd in 2024 and relies heavily on foreign crude. Russian oil became especially attractive after 2022 due to steep discounts, pushing imports from near zero to record levels.

With Russian flows potentially

India imported about 1.7 million bpd of Russian crude in the first nine months of 2025. Major purchasers like Reliance Industries Ltd have long-term supply agreements with Rosneft.

curtailed, refiners may need to shift sourcing toward the Middle East or Africa — likely at higher cost and with adjustments in refining configurations.

Rosneft's 2024 production was about 3.3 million bpd (31 per cent of Russia's total) and Lukoil's 1.6 million bpd (15 per cent). Combined exports of 3.1 million bpd represent around 3 per cent of global output. Because supply is so concentrated, even modest disruptions ripple through global markets.

In the short term, tightening Russian supply may push global fuel prices higher. Indian refiners face choices: stop direct purchases from the sanctioned Russian majors or redirect via intermediaries, raising costs and complexity. The shift may also push India back toward Opec+ or Middle Eastern sources.

Analysts say the sanctions signal how access to the US financial system could be restricted for entities dealing with the targeted firms — a message also heard in China.
