Syria's rebel-led government gets G-7 support

AL BASHIR TO LEAD TRANSITIONAL GOVERNMENT UNTIL MARCH 1

DUBAI
BY STEPHEN N. R.
Senior Associate Editor

The Group of Seven (G-7) leaders have expressed conditional support for a new rebel-led Syrian government, stressing the importance of a transition process that respects the rights of all minorities.

A draft communiqué obtained by Bloomberg calls on opposition groups to uphold the rights of all Syrians and ensure the safe return of millions displaced during the civil war, many of whom sought refuge in G-7 countries, including Germany.

Their statement follows the overthrow of President Bashar Al Assad and the appointment of Mohammad Al Bashir as head of a transitional government to remain in place until March 1.

Offering legitimacy

The G-7 endorsement offers legitimacy to opposition factions led by Hayat Tahrir Al Sham (HTS), a former Al Qaida affiliate designated as a terrorist organisation by the US and other nations.

Qatar has established a communication channel with HTS and other groups, an official told AFP yesterday. Talks between Qatari diplomats and Al Bashir are expected to continue in the coming days. Qatar aims to prevent extremist groups, such as Islamic State, from exploiting the power vacuum during Syria's transition.

US Secretary of State Antony Blinken underscored the need for the new government to respect minority rights, facilitate humanitarian aid, and ensure Syria is not used as a base for terrorism. "The Syrian people will decide the future of Syria," Blinken stated, urging global support for an inclusive political process. The US pledged to recognise a government that meets these standards and refrains from external interference.

The UAE, meanwhile, strongly condemned Israel's seizure of Golan Heights buffer zone.
