CHICAGO TRIBUNE

The city on Friday released long-awaited body camera videos showing the controversial death of Officer Krystal Rivera, the tactical officer fatally shot last year by her partner in the Auburn Gresham neighborhood.

The footage published by the Civilian Office of Police Accountability begins showing Rivera and her partner, Carlos Baker, chasing a suspect into an apartment building. The foot pursuit lasted only seconds, but the videos show Baker took about two minutes to render aid to his partner after firing the fatal round.

In the tense situation that unfolded on the cameras, Rivera ran toward the entrance to the building and yelled, "Let me see your hands!"

Rivera and Baker were quickly buzzed inside and the two rushed up a flight of stairs after the suspect, the videos show. As the suspect entered a unit, Baker followed close behind, with Rivera behind him. Baker can be seen kicking the door, and a man

The gloom that looms

A person makes their way along a walking path at Margaret T. Burroughs Beach in Chicago as dark clouds form overhead on Thursday. Chicagoland experienced a warm Friday before evening storms, which spurred tornado warnings in the region, made way for a chilly Saturday. Temperatures hit the low 80s on Friday, said Kevin Donofrio, a science and operations officer for the National Weather Service. Donofrio added that average highs in mid-April usually hang around 60 degrees, so Friday was particularly warm. "We've been in this kind of hot, humid and stormy pattern here," Donofrio said. But Friday night's storms will drop Saturday's high into the low 50s.

Iranian official says strait fully open to ships

BEIRUT — Iran said Friday it fully reopened the Strait of Hormuz to commercial vessels, but President Donald Trump said the American blockade on Iranian ships and ports "will remain in full force" until Tehran reaches a deal with the U.S., including on its nuclear program.

Iranian Foreign Minister Abbas Araghchi posted on X that the crucial waterway, through which about 20% of the world's oil is shipped, was now fully open to commercial vessels, as a 10-day truce between Israel and the Iran-backed Hezbollah militant group in Lebanon appeared to hold.

Araghchi said ships will use routes designated by the Islamic Republic in coordination with Iranian authorities. It was not clear if vessels would have to pay tolls.

A data firm, Kpler, said movement through the strait remained confined to corridors requiring Iran's approval.

Trump initially celebrated the Iranian announcement, posting on social media that the strait was "fully open and ready for full passage." But minutes later, he issued another post saying the U.S. Navy's blockade would continue "UNTIL SUCH TIME AS OUR TRANSACTION WITH IRAN IS 100% COMPLETE."

A spokesperson for the Iranian Foreign Ministry said the blockade was a violation of the cease-fire agreement.

ELECTION 2026
GOVERNOR

Bailey did not spend to win big

GOP nominee only raised $450K, relied on name recognition

By Rick Pearson
CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Buoyed by the name recognition he gained in his losing bid to Democratic Gov. JB Pritzker four years ago, Darren Bailey raised less than half a million dollars to win the GOP primary for governor and spent only about $2.30 per vote to handily defeat better-funded rivals, recently filed state campaign finance reports show.

The reports, filed with the Illinois State Board of Elections covering the first three months of this year, including the March 17 primary, showed Bailey raised only $450,938 to win the nomination and spent nearly $700,000 to capture more than 300,000 votes, or more than 53% of the ballots counted, according to unofficial totals with more than 95% of the vote tallied.

Bailey's spending was a far cry from four years ago, when he had millions of dollars to spend in both the primary and general election. He ultimately lost to Pritzker, the billionaire business owner and heir to the Hyatt Hotels fortune, by about 13 percentage points. Since Bailey won the GOP nomination last month, the former state lawmaker and farmer from downstate Xenia has only received about $25,000 in large-dollar donations, the reports show.

Bailey's largest individual donor was northwest suburban business owner Gary

CHICAGO PUBLIC SCHOOLS

CTU agrees to May Day compromise

Students, staff will be able to attend rallies

By Kate Armanini and Alice Yin
CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Chicago Public Schools will not cancel classes on May 1, though the district has agreed to provide buses for students and teachers who choose to attend an afternoon rally and other civic engagement events.

All CPS staff are expected to report for a full day of work, but principals can approve field trips to May Day events, the district said in a statement Friday.

"This agreement preserves the classroom time students deserve and respects our staff and families who must be able to trust CPS to uphold the academic school year calendar," district CEO Macqueline King said. "At the same time, the agreement honors the proud history of civic action in Chicago and beyond."

The Chicago Teachers Union has been pushing for weeks to designate May 1 a teacher-directed professional development day. The nationwide "no work, no school and no shopping" action is aimed at protesting federal policies and advocating for various causes, such as immigrant and labor rights.

But King has remained opposed to canceling classes, citing concerns of disruption to families.

Still, the district "will not retaliate" against students and teachers who attend May 1 events, according to a joint agreement between CTU and CPS signed Thursday.

CPS will provide 100 schools with bagged lunches and transportation to civic events or a rally in Union Park, the agreement said.
