P2JW297000-8-A00100-16DDF61078D

WSJ

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL WEEKEND

DOW JONES | News Corp ★★★★★★★★ SATURDAY/SUNDAY, OCTOBER 24 - 25, 2026 ~ VOL. CCLXXXVIII NO. 98 WSJ.com ★★★★ $6.00

What's News

Business & Finance

◆ Moderna's stock dropped after details of a cancer-vaccine study raised questions about how widely the treatment would be used. A1

◆ American Express is cutting 5% of its global workforce in an attempt to put a cap on rising costs. B11

◆ The Dow led indexes lower on Friday, falling 1.2%, while the Nasdaq fell only 0.2%. The S&P 500 lost 0.5%. B11

◆ Apple's new foldable iPhone went on sale in stores Friday and the reviews that greeted CEO John Ternus's big release were mixed. B11

◆ University of Michigan's latest monthly consumer-sentiment index ticked down to 48 in its end-of-month October reading, the second-lowest reading in the survey's history. A4

◆ The U.S. moved to exempt some Canadian products from 50% tariffs in a bid to help Maine Sen. Susan Collins and other Republicans in the midterm elections. A2

◆ SK Hynix has scrapped plans for a major U.S. public offering of its flash-memory subsidiary Solidigm. B11

◆ Volvo Car said it would cut another 2,500 jobs, or around 6% of its workforce, under a turnaround plan. B11

Worldwide

◆ Government corruption has climbed the list of voter concerns in recent weeks, as President Trump and White House aides have privately expressed frustration about negative headlines. A1

◆ The DOJ charged two former FBI employees who specialized in foreign election interference with allegedly lying to Congress about their involvement in investigations of former President Joe Biden's son Hunter. A3

◆ Trump said he asked the Justice Department to sue Alaska to prevent certification of the state's Senate results if the Republican candidate loses. A4

◆ A Southern California drug-rehab operator allegedly engaged in an elaborate scheme that involved providing recovering addicts with illegal drugs in order to keep billing their insurers for treatment. A3

◆ House Democrats are setting their political sights on Defense Secretary Pete Hegseth, pushing for his impeachment as the first spoils from anticipated wins in the midterm election. A3

◆ Israel's Benjamin Netanyahu ordered preparations for a "full lockdown" of the West Bank after an attack by two Palestinians killed two soldiers, escalating political tensions. A7

OPINION
Governor's race gets personal in Ohio. A15

CONTENTS

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Books | C7-12 | Obituaries | C6 |
| Business & Finance | B11 | Opinion | A13-15 |
| Design & Decor | D3 | Sports | A16 |
| Food | D9 | Style & Fashion | D2 |
| Heard on Street | B12 | Travel | D8 |
| Market Data | B7 | U.S. News | A2-6 |
| | | World News | A7-10 |

© 2026 Dow Jones & Company, Inc.
All Rights Reserved

Israel Orders West Bank Lockdown After Attack

HAZEM BADER/AFP/GETTY IMAGES

FIREFIGHT: Israeli soldiers take position Friday near one of the bodies of two Palestinian gunmen who attacked a checkpoint near Hebron, killing two soldiers. Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu ordered a West Bank lockdown, days before Israeli elections. A7

Vaccine Excites Doctors, Dismays Investors

Moderna cancer results win praise, but questions are raised about cost

By Lizzy Lawrence And Xavier Martinez

To the scientific world, Moderna's cancer vaccine's results proved that a highly personalized, immune-targeting medication can work. To investors, it didn't work well enough.

Details from Moderna's vaccine study showed that, when added to immunotherapy, it reduced the risk of melanoma returning by 42% when compared with immunotherapy alone.

Adil Daud, director of melanoma research at University of California, San Francisco, who worked on the trial, called it "a massive conceptual breakthrough." Scientists have been studying cancer vaccines for decades without success.

Moderna's stock tanked, however, down 19% in the days after the results were prematurely released.

"Investors wanted to see something that was better, something that really pointed to true differentiation," said Evan Seigerman, an analyst with BMO Capital Markets.

The disconnect shows how investors' expectations can outstrip the promise of experimental medicines—even ones scientists say are significant advances in treatment.

Please turn to page A6

AI Hacks Come Thick and Fast, Overwhelming Internet Defenses

By Robert McMillan

The AI-powered hackers began stealing from Colin Parsons at 11 p.m. on a recent Friday night.

The next morning, the startup founder woke up to see about 50 email messages, each one saying he had been charged a few more dollars for Anthropic and OpenAI's services. The bills ran to $449.

Parsons is just one of the latest victims in a wave of AI-powered attacks that has flooded the internet in recent weeks, as hackers increasingly turn to agents and AI hacking tools that make intrusions faster and harder to track.

"We've been seeing an explosion of these agentic adversaries," said Adam Meyers, a senior vice president with the cybersecurity firm CrowdStrike. "We've found advanced adversaries using this; we've found very unsophisticated adversaries using this."

The increase in hacks is part of a dizzying AI-driven acceleration of cybersecurity threats that is rippling around the world.

At the same time as new tools speed up hackers, cyber defenders are racing to fix the fast-growing volume of security bugs discovered by AI, before hackers can exploit the new flaws.

On Wednesday, organizations rushed to patch newly uncovered bugs that could allow takeover of as many as 70% of the world's websites. Hackers are actively trying to break into websites by exploiting these flaws, Amazon says.

The National Security Agency and Federal Bureau of Investigation told companies that couldn't immediately patch the web bugs to

Please turn to page A12

China Plows Ahead In Uyghur Region

Controversial Xinjiang is key to plan to expand exports, energy production

By Brian Spegele

KASHGAR, China—Four years ago, the United Nations human-rights agency said China's abuses in its far western Xinjiang region were so severe that they potentially amounted to "crimes against humanity."

The U.S. limited imports from the region and blacklisted dozens of Chinese companies over growing evidence that ethnic Uyghurs were being arbitrarily detained and used in forced labor.

Global firms such as BASF and Volkswagen sold their stakes in factories in Xinjiang, while Nike and H&M pledged that they weren't sourcing products from the region.

Yet a visit by The Wall Street Journal showed leader Xi Jinping is plowing ahead in transforming Xinjiang, despite international condemnation.

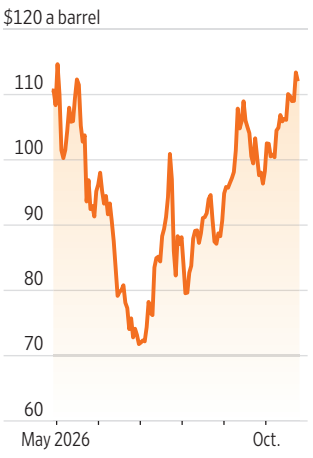

In Kashgar, a historic Silk Road trading post, shopping malls were jammed with Chi-

Please turn to page A12

Oil Price Rise Stings Stocks

Crude futures rose this week to levels last seen in the spring. B11

Brent crude oil futures price

Note: Continuous contract
Source: FactSet

Grift Climbs Charts Of Voters' Concerns

WASHINGTON—President Trump walked out of the White House on Thursday afternoon and delivered a warning to his political allies.

*By Marianne LeVine, Josh Dawsey and Meridith McGraw

"I want my people to be honest, and if they're not going to be honest, they have to be prosecuted," he said. "If people are not honest, they're stealing from me as president."

Trump's rebuke came in response to a question about his longtime adviser, Corey Lewandowski, who The Wall Street Journal reported was facing a Justice Department inquiry into allegations that he profited off his top position at the Department of Homeland Security. It was the latest in a series of damaging stories that have contributed to growing voter concerns about alleged government corruption just over a week before the midterm elections.

Trump and White House aides have privately expressed frustration about the negative headlines in recent weeks, according to people familiar with the matter. The stories have

Please turn to page A4

◆ DOJ suit intervenes in Alaska on GOP's behalf... A4

EXCHANGE

THE BILLIONAIRE GIVEAWAY
The ultrawealthy turn to kids' investment accounts. B1

He Doesn't Know Baseball—But He's a Star of This Playoff Run

* * *

Milwaukee man's comically simple rap becomes a symbol of the Brewers' season

By Esther Zuckerman

The rapper known as Foenem didn't know much about baseball when he set out to write a song about the Milwaukee Brewers. He didn't even know the team was in the playoffs.

"The information I did know was the little things like the pitcher, home runs, three strikes you're out," he said. "I'm like, 'I'm going to put everything I know about baseball and put it in a song.'"

The resulting track, called "Milwaukee Brewers," features high-pitched repetition of the team's name interspersed with comically simple lyrics—"Let's play some baseball and get some home runs."

And yet it hasn't just gone viral. The song has become the unofficial anthem of the Brewers' run to their first World Series since 1982. "Milwaukee Brewers" is a fixture of the team's clubhouse, where it's heard in the background of audio and video of interviews and celebrations. Pitcher DL Hall said the players hear it

Please turn to page A6

A School-Board Brawl Agitates Beverly Hills

By Jim Carlton

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif.—Before security escorted her out of a school-board meeting, parent Jackie Kruger—clad in a leopard-print jacket and wide-brimmed hat—warned the board's president that she would sue.

"You got to do what you got to do, baby," the president, Judy Manouchehri, shot back.

Welcome to the Beverly Hills Unified School District, home to one of the nastiest local races of the year, complete with flying insults, dueling restraining-order petitions and a yard-sign whodunit involving a white Tesla with a ski rack.

The women—both attorneys and mothers of three—will meet again Nov. 3, when Kruger tries to unseat Manouchehri. Kruger, 47 years old, accuses her 46-year-old rival of hurting schools in one of the world's most star-studded cities and fostering a climate of fear.

"When you're at rock bottom, there's only one place to go," Kruger said, eyes blazing, as she munched on grapes at home last week.

So much for swimmin' pools and movie stars. Yet the ruckus amid Rodeo Drive isn't isolated. Similar vitriol is shaking school boards and city halls nationwide as bread-and-butter local issues give way to

Please turn to page A2