

I had an affair with my hunky son-in-law

Yes, I know it's outrageous – but I blame my daughter

Daily Mail

dailymail.co.uk

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 14, 2025

£1.10 85p to subscribers

SCAN TO SUBSCRIBE
AND SAVE

Trump accused of 'appeasement' over peace talks with Putin

THREE-PAGE
SPECIAL

Amid row over her 'exaggerated' CV, it's revealed Chancellor was probed over expense claims before she left HBOS bank

By Jason Groves
Political Editor

RACHEL Reeves was last night under pressure to 'come clean' about her employment past, amid claims she was investigated for fiddling her expenses.

The Chancellor is battling to maintain her credibility after admitting to further inaccurate claims on her much-mocked CV.

Last night she came out fighting over allegations that she was investigated over her expenses claims shortly before leaving her job in the customer relations department of HBOS bank in 2009.

A BBC investigation reported that the bank launched an internal audit into Ms Reeves and two fellow managers after a whistleblower complained they were using their company expense accounts to 'fund a lifestyle'.

Inappropriate spending is said to have included lavish dinners, taxis and gifts, including for each other.

Ms Reeves is said to have bought a £152 handbag on expenses as a Christmas gift for her boss in 2008. The boss, who signed off Ms Reeves' claims, gave

Turn to Page 6

REEVES UNDER PRESSURE TO 'COME CLEAN' ON EXPENSES