

WSJ

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL WEEKEND

DOW JONES | News Corp  SATURDAY/SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 22 - 23, 2025 ~ VOL. CCLXXXVI NO. 123 WSJ.com ★★★★★ $6.00

What's News

Business & Finance

◆ Crypto-market turmoil intensified as bitcoin shed more than 10% in the past week, adding to a meltdown that has erased $1 trillion in value from digital currencies more broadly since October. A1

◆ The S&P 500 fell almost 2% this past week and is down 3.5% in November, even after a snapback on Friday. The Nasdaq lost 2.7% for the week and is down 6.1% this month while the Dow lost 1.9% this week and 2.8% in November. B11

◆ The booming market for weight-loss drugs has propelled Eli Lilly to become the first pharmaceutical company to hit $1 trillion in market capitalization. B10

◆ Tyson Foods will close one of its largest beef-processing plants in Nebraska as a U.S. cattle shortage squeezes meatpacking companies. B10

◆ Bill Ackman is looking to take public his hedge-fund firm, Pershing Square, and a new investment fund simultaneously, according to people familiar with the matter. B11

◆ GE Appliances said it has awarded $150 million in contracts to American suppliers as it prepares to move some manufacturing from China. B11

◆ Nokia is investing an additional $4 billion in U.S.-based manufacturing and research and development. B11

World-Wide

◆ Trump said he wants Ukraine to accept a sweeping U.S. deal to end its war with Russia by Thanksgiving, giving Kyiv less than a week to decide whether to agree to a draft plan that would make major concessions to Russia. A1, A6

◆ The price of Russia's flagship oil grade is down about 17% since new U.S. sanctions were announced while the price of Brent crude edged up. A6

◆ Rep. Marjorie Taylor Greene (R., Ga.), whose once close relationship with Trump imploded this month, said she would resign from Congress at the start of next year. A3

◆ Trump and New York City Mayor-elect Zohran Mamdani, who have spent months antagonizing one another, set aside their differences—for now—following a meeting at the White House. A4

◆ New Mexico, one of the nation's poorest states, has launched one of its most ambitious social policies: universal child care. A3

◆ The Democratic National Committee, struggling to raise money, took out a $15 million loan in October to bolster its finances. A4

◆ The U.S. is pushing ahead with plans to build communities for Palestinians on the Israeli side of the line dividing Gaza, in hopes of pulling civilians away from areas controlled by Hamas. A10

NOONAN

Epstein is a failure of the 21st-century elites A15

CONTENTS Markets..... B11
Biggest Stocks..... B8 Markets Digest... B6
Books..... R1-14 Obituaries..... C6
Business & Finance..... B10 Opinion..... A13-15
Exchange..... B2-5 Sports..... A12
From Page One... A11 U.S. News..... A2-4
Heard on Street... B12 World News... A6-710

4 7 6 4 9 >
0 78908 63144 2

© 2025 Dow Jones & Company, Inc.
All Rights Reserved

Trump, Mamdani Set Aside Differences—For Now

COMMON GROUND: President Trump and New York City Mayor-elect Zohran Mamdani, who spent months trading barbs, focused on mutual goals Friday after an Oval Office meeting. Trump said he believes the Democratic socialist ‘can do a very good job.’ A4

Trump Presses Ukraine to Back Peace Deal Tilted Toward Russia

President Trump said he wants Ukraine to accept a sweeping U.S. deal to end its nearly four-year-old war with

By Ian Lovett,
Lara Seligman
and Thomas Grove

Russia by Thanksgiving, giving Kyiv less than a week to decide whether to agree to a draft plan that would make major concessions to Russia. “Thursday is, we think, an appropriate time,” Trump told Fox News Radio in response to a question about whether he had given Ukraine a Thanksgiving deadline to agree to the plan. Trump suggested he might extend the deadline “if things are working well.”

The 28-point U.S. plan includes territorial concessions, a cap on the size of Ukraine’s active duty military and other provisions that President Volodymyr Zelensky of Ukraine has previously rejected, The Wall Street Journal has reported.

“Now is one of the most difficult moments in our history,” Zelensky said in a video address Friday. “Now Ukraine may find itself facing a very difficult choice. Either loss of dignity, or the risk of losing a key partner.” Later on Friday, when asked about Zelensky’s reaction to the U.S. proposal, Trump said: “He’ll have to like it. And if he doesn’t like it then, you know, they should just keep fighting.”

Please turn to page A6

◆ Sanctions ricochet through oil markets..... A6
◆ Zelensky faces toughest moment..... A6

Powell Isn’t Only Hurdle For President on Rates

By NICK TIMIRAOS

President Trump said this week he expects much lower interest rates once he can install a new Federal Reserve chair next May. Growing opposition to a December rate cut inside the central bank suggests he might not get his way.

Chair Jerome Powell is facing more internal resistance no matter what he chooses to do in December than to any other decision in his eight-year tenure. That divide could persist well into next year, which means that simply changing the chair won’t guarantee more rate reductions.

Some Fed veterans worry that Trump, rather than accept that outcome, will take even more forceful steps to curb the central bank’s independence and secure the lower rates he wants.

For more than 30 years, Fed chairs have sought to craft the broadest possible consensus around rate decisions. Narrow majority votes never happen. There is now a real prospect of three or more dissenting votes in December whether Powell elects to pause or cut.

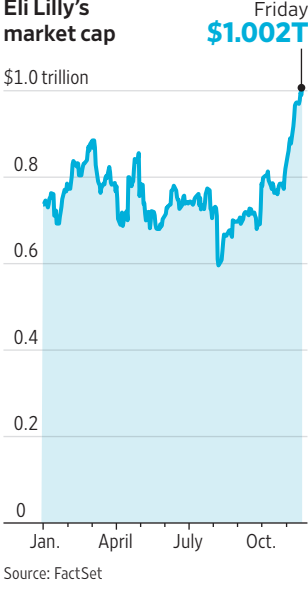

“What you’re seeing right now is that the process seems to be breaking apart, and we risk moving next year into an environment with a very deeply divided committee,” said Krishna Guha of investment bank Evercore ISI.

Please turn to page A2

◆ Williams sees room for ‘near-term’ rate cut..... A2

Eli Lilly Joins Exclusive Club

Company hits $1 trillion in market capitalization. B10

Summers’s Power Delayed Fallout Over Epstein Ties

Former Treasury secretary’s clout long insulated him from repercussions

Last November, a collection of business, academic and political luminaries made a pilgrimage to Harvard Uni-

By Joshua Chaffin,
Melissa Korn and Justin Lahart

versity. They were there to pay tribute to Lawrence Summers, the former Treasury Secretary and university president, one of the foremost economists of his era. During a day-long event to mark his 70th birthday, Summers basked in praise from guests including former Meta chief operating officer Sheryl Sandberg and Gene Sperling, who directed the National Economic Council for Presidents Clinton and Obama.

This week, Summers found himself in different circumstances: standing in a Harvard lecture hall, asking his students’ forgiveness as his professional life was un-

Please turn to page A11

This Thanksgiving Tradition Has Growing Potential

Clandestine trip to smoke pot before dinner goes commercial; ‘Green Wednesday’

By ELLEN GAMERMAN

Ever notice at Thanksgiving dinner when certain members of your family return from “walking the dog” or “picking up more ice,” you’re suddenly a paragon of wit and insight?

You’re not. They’re just high. Thank — or blame—the “cousin walk.” The term is shorthand for the moment when certain younger members of the family quietly grab their coats, glance toward the door and—clutch those pearls—get stoned before rejoining the festivities with altered minds and ravenous hunger.

“We kind of look at each other and go, ‘Ready for that walk?’” says Priyanka Pulijal, 36, a Los Angeles cannabis enthusiast. Please turn to page A11

High season

It’s Harvard vs. Yale For a Spot in Playoffs

By RACHEL BACHMAN
AND LAINE HIGGINS

For generations, the Ivy League looked down its nose at the very idea of a football playoff. Such trivial concerns were left to lesser schools, institutions that perhaps couldn’t appreciate the sanctity of a 10-week regular season, the purity of life without football scholarships, or the venerable tradition of Harvard-Yale.

But on Saturday, those two schools will compete for a chance to gain admission to an elite society of high achievers where no Ivy Leaguer has gone before. The Football Championship Subdivision playoffs.

For the first time in roughly a century, an Ivy League football team will receive a postseason berth and have the opportunity to win a national title. Never mind that it is the second tier of college football. For Ivy Leaguers, this is harder to get into than law school.

The change came about because athletes in other sports kept asking why they could compete for NCAA postseason glory, but their friends on the football team weren’t allowed. Please turn to page A12

EXCHANGE

WHAT BUBBLE? AMD’s chief is staring down Nvidia and talk of a bust. B1