

The Boston Globe

Serving our community since 1872

MONDAY, JUNE 16, 2025

In stunning trade, Red Sox send Devers to SF

$313m slugger declined to switch positions as injuries decimated team

By Peter Abraham
GLOBE STAFF

The Red Sox made one of the most stunning trades in team history on Sunday, sending three-time All-Star Rafael Devers to the Giants for four players.

Righthander Jordan Hicks and lefthander Kyle Harrison are headed to the Sox along with two minor leaguers: 20-year-old rookie league right-hander Jose Bello and 22-year-old Single A outfielder James Tibbs.

Rafael Devers

The Giants also took on the remainder of Devers's contract, approximately $254 million through 2033.

Devers was told of the trade after the Sox beat the Yankees, 2-0, at Fenway Park on Sunday and did not accompany the team to Seattle to start its road trip.

The Sox are scheduled to face the Giants in San Francisco for a three-game series starting on Friday.

Devers, 28, agreed to a 10-year, $313.5 million contract before the 2023 season. He performed at a high level for two seasons before his relationship with the team took a sharp downward turn in February.

DEVERS, Page C4

The promise, pitfalls of AI in health agency

RFK Jr. lauds use, but some are wary following troubled rollout of report

By Tal Kopan
GLOBE STAFF

WASHINGTON — Last month as he defended his agency's budget request to senators, Health Secretary Robert F. Kennedy Jr. made a lofty promise about artificial intelligence: "The AI revolution has arrived and we will be the cutting-edge agency using this technology."

Less than 10 days later, a White House report intended to be the opening salvo of Kennedy's efforts to reshape biomedicine was found to have fake citations, bearing the hallmarks of AI-generated false information.

Experts in AI and its use in biomedicine say the idea of the Health and Human Services Department and its subsidiaries using the power of the technology is theoretically a good one. But in practice, they warn, if Kennedy fails to understand its limitations, that could lead to disappointment or potentially dangerous consequences.

And with the apparent inclusion of material

KENNEDY, Page A7

GETTY IMAGES

Tehran residents observed the Shahran oil depot in flames on Sunday after an Israeli air attack.

Israel expands air war targets

Hits refineries, government ministries; Iranian missiles reach civilian areas

AMIR LEVY/GETTY IMAGES

A body was removed after an overnight missile strike killed at least six people in Bat Yam, Israel.

By Susannah George and Gerry Shih
WASHINGTON POST

Israeli strikes targeting Iranian energy production facilities, manufacturing plants, government ministries, and aviation signaled the start of a wider and more intense phase of the conflict Sunday, as Israeli war planes took to the daytime skies and headed deeper into Iran.

Tehran residents reported the heaviest wave of attacks yet on Sunday afternoon, with explosions ringing out every half hour. The Israeli military reported striking "more than 80 targets" in Tehran alone overnight Saturday, and by Sunday afternoon it said over 250 targets and more than 720 components had been struck.

The targets appear to indicate an expansion of Israel's war aims beyond the Iranian nuclear facilities that consumed the first days of the conflict. By striking Iranian industry, local security forces, and infrastructure, Israel is aiming to degrade the Iranian state, further damage the country's already-reeling economy and possibly trigger regime change, according to analysts and former officials.

The Iranian attacks, meanwhile, also showed no sign of abating, with both sides ignoring international calls to pause the fighting. Israel said Iran

MIDEAST, Page A6

'I can't take being locked up like this anymore.'

KARY DIAZ MARTINEZ, a mother of two from the Dominican Republic detained at the Burlington site

ICE takes heat as complaints mount over use of field office/detainee cells

By Giulia McDonnell
Nieto del Rio
GLOBE STAFF

They have been sleeping on concrete floors, without mattresses or sheets. Fed crackers and microwave oatmeal, unable to shower, and denied menstrual products for days, they are bunched together in small cells, taking turns grabbing a gulp of fresh air from a gap under the door. These are some of the allegations from detained immigrants, their attorneys, and advocates concerning conditions at the US immigration field office in Burlington, which has doubled as a holding center as the Trump administration's surge in arrests has swamped government official detention facilities. In May, Immigration and Customs Enforcement reported 1,461 arrests in Massachusetts, officials said, part of what it dubbed "Operation Patriot."

Dozens of those caught up in the operation are now being held at the Burlington field office. In the past, the agency largely used the space for administrative work or to hold people for a few hours. It is only equipped with holding cells and office rooms, those who have been inside have said.

In a statement, a spokesperson for ICE said the Burlington office "is

DETENTION, Page A10

Emerging out of Baker's shadow

Gubernatorial rivals each rely on former associates

By Matt Stout
GLOBE STAFF

Massachusetts' fledgling gubernatorial race so far includes two Republicans with government résumés inextricably tied to Charlie Baker, the former governor who's come to embody the state GOP's moderate establishment.

The primary is still 15 months away, but some in Baker world are already picking their corners.

Weeks after launching his challenge of Governor Maura Healey, former MBTA executive Brian Shortleeve has pulled in donations from fellow Baker appointees, Cabinet members, and the head of a Baker-aligned super PAC, helping fuel his early fund-raising edge in the race.

Mike Kennealy, a former member of Baker's Cabinet who was first to leap into the race, has in turn enlisted several of Baker's former top political hands for his own campaign. He's heavily invested his own wealth so far, but Kennealy, who oversaw housing and economic development for Baker, has also gotten donations from former members of Baker's finance committee as well as Beth Lindstrom, who once led

GOP, Page B4

Ex-rays vision

Monday: Mostly cloudy, breezy. High 64-69, low 55-60.

Tuesday: More clouds. High 68-73, low 61-66. Sunrise: 5:07. Sunset: 8:23.

Weather and comics, D4-5. Obituaries, C9.

For breaking news, updated stories, and more, visit our website:

BostonGlobe.com

VOL. 307, NO. 167

*

Suggested retail price
$4.00

Assassination suspect held

An arrest was made in Minn. lawmaker's death, source said. A2. Former Harvard classmates mourned the lawmaker. B1.

The state's public defender agency is preparing requests for the release of dozens of criminal defendants who remain held without representation following a work stoppage by court-appointed attorneys. B1.

Architect Graham Gund has died. The noted designer of buildings in Boston and beyond and prolific benefactor of the arts was 84. B1.

The soggy truth is that the nonstop weekend rains actually help some local businesses and museums. D1.

THE BATTLE HYMN OF THE NEW REPUBLIC

HEATHER DIEHL FOR THE BOSTON GLOBE

Musicians filled the streets of Charlestown as people gathered to watch the Bunker Hill Day Parade Sunday as part of commemorations for the 250th anniversary of the Battle of Bunker Hill. B2.

0 947725 4